Police Suspect Foul Play in Death of Girl

Teen-Ager's Body Found in Woods In Green Bay

Post-Crescent News Service

GREEN BAY — Police are searching for clues in the mysterious death of a young girl whose partially clad body was discovered in a wooded area on the city's far southwest side early this morning.

Green Bay Police Chief Elmer Madson said that the girl's identity has not been established. He said the girl was about 16 years of age.

"Indications are that she met with foul play," Madson said.

A person walking through the wooded area off Indian Hill Road near the Oneida Golf and Riding Club discovered the body. He notified police about 7 a.m.

Police moved in quickly to cordon off the area to keep away the curious. The first officer on the scene covered the body with a blanket and the body has not yet been examined.

The State Crime Laboratory in Madison has been called to assist in the investigation, Madson said. He said the body will not be moved or examined until the state experts can comb the area for clues.

Police have cordoned off a six or seven acre area.

Officials could not pin down how the girl died or was killed or what condition her body was in. Brown County Coroner Timothy Blaney was on the scene but an autopsy will not be conducted until the crime lab unit arrives.

"Indications at the scene were that the girl had met death by violent means," Madson said. "The victim's clothing was strewn about the area and she was found in a partially disrobed condition."

There also were no indications if the girl met death at the location.

Busing Approved For Integration

WASHINGTON (AP) — A unanimous Supreme Court held today federal courts may order busing of public school children as a means of desegregating schools.

"Desegregation plans cannot be limited to the walk-in school," said Chief Justice Warren E. Burger in announcing the most important ruling of the term.

At the same time, the court held fixed racial ratios are not required in all the schools of a community.

As Burger said: "The constitutional command to desegregate schools does not mean that every school in every community must always reflect the racial composition of the school system as a whole."

However, the court ruled valid the use of a white-black ratio system for schools in Charlotte, Mecklenburg County, N.C.

Discretion of District

"The very limited use of mathematical ratios was within the equitable remedial discretion of the district court," said the chief justice.

In all respects the court was unanimous as it ruled on school cases from Mobile County, Ala., and Clarke County, Ga., as well as the Charlotte case.

Burger delivered all five opinions, taking command as his predecessor, Earl Warren, did when the court in 1954 first declared segregation of public school students for racial reasons was unconstitutional.

Duel Systems

Among the court's findings was that the North Carolina anti-busing law is unconstitutional because it prevents implementation of desegregation plans. The law forbade assignment of students on account of race or for the purpose of creating racial balance. Additionally, it prohibited "involuntary" busing as well as the use of public funds for such busing.

Said Burger: "If a state-imposed limitation on a school authority's discretion operates to inhibit or obstruct the operation of a unitary school system or impede the disestablishing of a dual school system, it must fall; state policy must give way when it operates to hinder vindication of federal constitutional guarantees."

The courtroom was packed, as usual. Specators included springtime tourists who listened impassively to Burger's 15-minute announcement of the rulings. All nine members of the court were on the bench. Five f their clerks stood in a side passageway listening intently to the momentous rulings.

As if to train a special light on the rulings the court announced no others. The justices proceeded immediately to the hearing of a draft case involving a Danish citizen.

1954 Objective

Burger, in announcing the school decision, said, "our objective remains what it was May 17, 1954—to eliminate state-imposed segregation." He said, "at no time has the court deviated" from this objective.

The rulings contrasted, in a way, with the court's gradual shift to the right and its steady revision of Warren court rulings in the two years Burger has been chief justice. In the school cases, as in Negro and women employment rulings earlier this term, the court continued the course set under Warren.

In his opinion in the Charlotte-Mecklenburg case, Burger described segregation as an "evil" and reiterated a 1968 court decision that school authorities have an affirmative duty to eliminate racial discrimination "root and branch."

"If school authorities fail in their affirmative obligation under these holdings, judicial authority may be invoked," he said.

Past Wrongs

"Once a right and a violation have been shown, the scope of a district court's equitable powers to remedy past wrongs is broad, for breadth and flexibility are inherent in equitable remedies."

Again, Burger said of the powers of federal judges trying to cope with recalcitrant school boards: "The task is to correct, by a balancing of the individual and collective interests, the condition that offends the Constitution."

However, he said, judges should exercise their authority "only when local authority defaults."

In the Mobile case the court rejected the argument that teachers must be assigned on a "color blind" basis. Burger said federal judges may use their "equity power" to assign teachers in a way that achieves a particular degree of faculty desegregation.

Combat Dressed Veterans Protest War in Capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two thousand battle-dressed Vietnam veterans have temporarily shifted their antiwar protest from the streets of the national capital into the offices of Congress.

Still wearing their jungle camouflage fatigues and other bits and pieces of uniform, the veterans sought meetings with House and Senate members to tell how they turned against the war.

Initial reaction from the legislators was mixed.

"Those who have tended to be liberal on the war talked to us," said one veteran after initial visits Monday. "Those who have been more hawkish were 'out.'"

War Dress

"Some people didn't like the way we dressed," said another, "but the way we are dressed was largely the way we dressed in 'Nam.'"

The sight of 2,000 uniformed ex-soldiers marching on their government Monday as a new twist for the antiwar demonstrations frequent in Washington over the past few years.

The scene at the west front of the Capitol gave something of the image of a battle zone, with several vets carrying toy copies of the M-16 rifles they lugged in Vietnam.

Traces of Navy blue and Marine olive drab speckled the predominantly Army crowd. There was a flak suit with Air Force wings on the chest, gold wings of a Navy pilot, bars of officers and stripes of sergeants. And berets of varied hue.

Young Faces

The faces were young, but grimmer than those of the usual student demonstrators.

"Unlike the demonstrators of the past, we know from experience what the war is like," proclaimed the Vietnam Veterans Against the War which is sponsoring the week-long protest.

The veterans are bivouaced on the Mall before the Capitol. A federal appeals court lifted part of an injunction Monday which had allowed them to stay there Sunday night provided they didn't sleep.

They stirred early Monday and marched to Arlington National Cemetery where a memorial service was conducted by a former chaplain. But the mother and widow of two men killed in the war were not allowed to place wreaths in the cemetery.

Then they marched to the Capitol: young men pacing wheelchairs and others who swung on crutches, hobbled on canes or tapped out the way ahead with the long, white sticks of the blind.

They plan to march again Friday and return their war medals to the government. With a memorial service at Washington National Cathedral Friday night they end their phase of the spring campaign and turn over the demonstrating to other groups.

Lucey, Armed With Bills, Declares War on Pollution

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Gov. Patrick J. Lucey today handed the legislature a bundle of new environmental protection bills and, in a message delivered from the podium of the State Assembly, asserted that the environmental crisis equals in importance the most grave issues ever confronted by the men who have ruled the state.

The constitutional rights of life, liberty and pursuit of happiness cannot be assured in a "befouled environment," he asserted as he recommended enactment of a batch of new laws. They include proposals to establish a public register of polluters, make them responsible for monitoring waste discharges and reporting them to enforcement agencies, and to encourage citizen prosecution of environmental pollution by removing the burden of proof from the citizen and the state and putting it on the user of natural resources, notably air and water.

The Lucey program basically would build upon a series of new enactments achieved by preceding Republican administrations, and notably that of predecessor Gov. Warren P. Knowles.

The Democratic executive acknowledged that some of his ideas already are incorporated in bills offered by Democratic and Republican members of the legislature now in session.

The governor appeared to give more emphasis to what he called a need for the public to change its scale of cultural and economic values than to explicit proposals for new laws and governmental machinery.

Related Story on Page A-7.

"We must be willing to sacrifice some of our conveniences for the sake of environmental protection," he lectured, declaring that many of the conveniences of modern society are major causes of product output that cannot be used, that wastes resources, and aggravates disposal problems.

"Until environmentally sound products are given preference over the non-returnable, non-recyclable ones, we will face an ever increasing solid waste disposal problem," he said. He called for a new "conservation ethic" that must be accepted by industry, the government, and private citizens in the mass.

Lucey recommended a $2.7 million appropriation, representing money originally withheld from the Department of Natural Resources budget, to finance a team of pollution "detectives" which would make unannounced point of source inspections to check state pollution control orders in all categories. More money also would be provided for surveillance of air and water discharges, inspection of municipal treatment facilities, air pollution monitoring and control, and more aggressive solid waste disposal.

More Bonding

The governor also asked the legislature to approve an accelerated program of bonding for municipal pollution control by the state by adding $27.5 millions to that fund for a total biennial sum of $60 millions.

Other major propositions laid before the legislators, most of whom share Lucey's view that resource protection is the most pressing political issue of the day:

— Requiring industries and others to submit their own reports on pollution volumes to the state, and to make them liable for annual levies up to $10,000 to pay for monitoring on a scale determined by the quality and quantity of effluent.

— Enlarging the authority of the public service commission over the construction and location of power generating facilities by requiring a lag of at least a year in advance of any new construction, and the filing of 10-year construction plans for the inspection of the regulatory agency by the power companies.

Citizen Rights

— Giving any citizen of the state the right to start pollution cases in the state courts by an exyansion of the public nuisance law, and requiring the DNR to accept any complaints about pollution filed by six or more

Young Brothers Held in Death

Baby Found Tied to Cross

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The battered body of an 18-month-old boy, missing for five days, has been found tied to a crude wooden cross and hidden in a dark corner of a basement where grade school boys played, police said.

Two brothers, age 7 and 10, are in custody after telling police Monday they found the boy, Noah S. Alba, on the street, took him to the basement and were "playing with him," Police Lt. Charles Ellis said.

Ellis told a news conference after taking statements from the brothers that he believes Noah died Wednesday. That was the day he disappeared from Alta Plaza Park where his mother, Melania Alba, 21, had taken him and his 3-year-old sister to play.

The cause of death will be determined by an autopsy, Ellis said. He said there were "some signs of kicking and scratching" on the body and blood stains on one of several mattresses scattered on the floor of the basement.

The boy was tied with cloth strips to the small wooden cross "as a means of keeping him from escaping," Ellis quoted the brothers as saying. He declined to discuss details of their statments or to identify them.

"On account of their age, we are taking them into protective custody and I don't want to get into what they said," Ellis said. "We admonished them as we would adults in taking their statements."

The brothers were picked up at a playground after a woman telephoned police suggesting they talk with some boys in the neighborhood, Ellis said.

The basement of the occupied three-story residence where the body was found Monday afternoon is about two blocks from the park where Noah disappeared. The brothers and the victim's family all live in the area, on the edge of the Fillmore district.

Lon Nol Cites Poor Health In Resigning

Observers Feel Cambodian Premier Just Cleaning House

PHNOM PENH (AP) — Some observers in Phnom Penh viewed the resignation today of Premier Lon Nol as a maneuver to permit him a thorough housecleaning of his cabinet.

Others speculated that the ailing leader would designate Deputy Premier Sisowath Sirik Matak as his successor, or that the way had been opened for challenges from Son Ngoc Than, former leader of the anti-Sihanouk Free Khmer movement, of National Assembly President In Tam.

Lon Nol's younger brother, Lt. Col. Lon Non, predicted that the premier would be back in office shortly with a new cabinet. "Illness is not the real reason behind his resignation," Lon Non told the newsmen. "The real reason is that when he came back from Hawaii, it was necessary to put together a new government."

Suffered Stroke

Poor health was the reason Lon Nol gave in his letter of resignation to Chief of State Cheng Heng. The 57-year-old premier was felled by a stroke Feb. 8 that paralyzed his left side. He returned last Monday after treatment by the U.S. Army in Honolulu but walked with difficulty and was assisted by male nurses.

The announcement that he and his Cabinet were resigning came as a surprise since he said before leaving Hawaii that he planned to resume direction of the government and would govern with "help from friends."

Vice President Fears U.S. Disadvantage

Visit by Americans to Communist China Upsets Agnew

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew has expresed concern privately over the American table tennis team's visit to China—and about possible adverse effects U.S. overtures toward Peking might have on the Nationalist government on Taiwan.

Agnew Monday told Republican governors here for a conference he was concerned by overemphasis on the Chinese tour by the 15 American athletes, and about the way their journey was reported in the United States.

"Basically, he was saying some of the things that were praised in China were things that would be criticized here," one GOP governor said.

Agnew also was quoted as expressing doubt about some aspects of current U.S. efforts at improved relations with China during a Sunday night conversation with a small group of Republicans. One man who was there said the vice president emphasized then that the United States still has commitments to the Nationalist government.

Differ With Nixon

There seemed in Agnew's reported comments evidence of differences with President Nixen's China policy. But at the same time, one Republican said Agnew also had declared his approval of administration efforts to improve U.S. trade relations with Peking.

At a Monday luncheon, Agnew questioned the emphasis put on the table tennis tour and at the reactions of the U.S. travelers. He noted one of the Americans had described a 15-square-foot room as the apartment of a Chinese family, implying approval when the same quarters in the United States would have been criticized as evidence of poverty.

The China question also came up, said a Republican source, in an off-the-record session the vice president had early Monday morning with nine reporters.

The 2½-hour meeting with reporters began at 12:30 a.m. when the vice president called the newsmen into his hotel room.

U.S. Disadvantage

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, not represented at the session, said it learned the vice president had expressed concern that the table team's visit and reception had trapped the United States into a disadvantageous position in world opinion.

Agnew was quoted by the newspaper as having objected to some press accounts of the trip, particularly the use of the word "exquisite" in one story to describe Chinese courtesy in matching less-skilled players against the Americans.

Good Players

John Roderick of The Associated Press began a dispatch from Peking on Tuesday, April 13, with these two paragraphs:

"Visiting United States table tennis players met a Chinese team Tuesday before 18,000 cheering enthusiasts in a match that could be described as an exquisite display of Chinese tact and politeness to guests.

"The Chinese regard themselves—and are regarded widely—as among the world's best at the swift-moving game. They could have fielded powerful players and humiliated their American guests. They didn't. It turned out that the Chinese men won only by a score of 5 to 3 and the scrappy U.S. women's team bowed to the Chinese women 5 to 4."

The nine newsmen invited to the off-the-record meeting with Agnew included an Associated Press reporter.

The New York Times reported that a number of Republicans expressed astonishment at Agnew's aligning himself against Nixon on the issue.

"The only people that I have heard disagreeing with Nixon on this one," a conservative Republican was quoted as saying, "are Lester Maddox and Spiro T. Agnew."

A Midwestern governor said he had been dumbfounded by the vice president's remarks, according to the newspaper.

The Times also reported that Agnew, discussing his own standing in the Republican party, conceded he might well have been damaged by the pointedness of his partisan thrusts during the last two years.

One participant in the meetings was quoted as saying Agnew remarked that he was not sure whether he would constitute an asset or liability to the GOP national ticket in 1972. The account added that Agnew insisted he had not yet decided whether he would be willing to seek re-election next year.

City-Suburb School Mixture Vote Pressed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Accusing President Nixon and Congress of passing the buck on desegregation, Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff is pressing for a vote requiring inner-city and suburban schools to combine enrollments to achieve integration.

The power and influence of the courts are going to be destroyed unless the President and Congress face up to their responsibilities, the Connecticut Democrat said Monday.

Ribicoff is trying to add his amendment to a $1.5-billion Nixon administration bill to aid the states in desegregating schools. He said he would like a vote on the proposal anytime this week, but Senate leaders have announced no schedule.

Metropolitan Area

The amendment, applying to metropolitan areas, would require states and school districts to submit plans which in a decade would lead to dividing minority-group pupils equally between inner-city and suburban schools.

The President and Congress "have found ways to duck this problem for years," Ribicoff said. "We focused on the South as the only part of the country that denied its citizens equal rights.

"We have been delighted to let the courts take the lead on this issue—and thereby also take the heat.

"Year after year anguished citizens in this country have had no recourse but to turn to the courts for relief," he said.

"To many men in public and private life have been anxious to be hesitant followers—and never leaders—on the question of integration.

"This is especially true of the President, who has a major responsibility in this field but has failed to exercise leadership."

Chances for adoption of the Ribicoff amendment appear slim. Only one other senator, Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., endorsed it immediately.

Mondale said he agrees with Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., and other Southerners that there has not been adequate enforcement of school integration in the North.

"We know that the cities are getting blacker and blacker and the suburbs whiter and whiter," he said.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., floor manager for the money bill, emphasized, however, the legislation is not intended to deal with enforcement.

Instead, he said, it offers funds on a voluntary basis to school districts wishing to face desegregation problems and willing to meet the strict standards set down for spending the money.

"This is a fair and equitable bill," he said. "It treats all sections of the country alike."

Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., announced he would seek to allow states and school districts to use their shares of the $1.5 billion in any way they see fit, and not restrict its use to aiding desegregation.

Manson Execution Sentence Affirmed

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge has formally sentenced Charles Manson and three women followers to die in the gas chamber for the Sharon Tate murders, and the chief defense attorney says the sentences are likely to be carried out.

Paul Fitzgerald, who argued Monday for reduction of the penalty on grounds that jurors were swayed by the current moratorium on executions, said it is invalid to assume that legalities will save the four from death.

There has not been an execution in the United States since 1967. State courts are waiting for a ruling from the U.S. Supreme Court on whether the death penalty is constitutional.

"Many legal observers feel that this Supreme Court will affirm the death penalty," Fitzgerald told newsmen. If that happens, he said, Manson and the women could be put to death along with more than 90 persons awaiting execution on San Quentin's Death Row.

Automatic Appeals

Manson and the women, however, face automatic appeals which could delay their deaths as long as five years.

Fitzgerald told the judge a juror confided to him that if he had thought the defendants would actually be executed, he couldn't have voted for death.

Superior Court Judge Charles H. Older turned down motions for a new trial, a motion to question jurors about their verdicts, and another to reduce the sentence to life imprisonment. He then pronounced sentence and stated his own feeling about the case publicly for the first time.

"After 9½ months of trial," he said, "all the superlatives have been used. All the hyperbole has been engaged in . . . All that remains are the bare stark facts of seven senseless murders—seven people whose lives were snuffed out by total strangers for motives that remain known only to them. . . . Not only is the death penalty appropriate but it is almost compelled by this case."

3 Women

Manson, 36, and three women members of his nomadic hippie-style clan — Patricia Krenwinkel, 23, Leslie Van Houten, 21, and Susan Atkins, 22—were condemned to death March 29 by the same jury which convicted them of murder-conspiracy in the slayings of Miss Tate and six others.

Miss Tate, a blonde, pregnant actress, was savagely slain at her mansion along with four visitors in August 1969. The next night a wealthy market owner and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Leno LaBianca, were similarly stabbed.

Judge Older ordered Manson taken to San Quentin's Death Row and the women to the California Institition for Women at Frontera. No execution dates were set pending appeals. For the time being, Manson and Miss Atkins will remain in county jail for another murder trial which they face in Los Angeles. Miss Van Houten and Miss Krenwinkel are to be moved to Frontera within 10 days.

Man-Made Rain Imported For Everglades Fire Control

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Fires that have blackened a half-million acres of parched Florida grasslands have prompted forestry officials impatient with nature to import a man-made rain machine.

The machine is a twin-engine CL215, an amphibious, water-bombing airplane, on loan from Canada. It was ready to make passes today at a nine-mile string of fires in the Everglades.

Robert Miller, district forester of the Florida Division of Forestry, said the rainmaker was an experiment in dousing smouldering muck fires that persistently ignite blazes on the dry grasslands.

Skimming Lake Okeechobee at 75 miles per hour, the plane will scoop up water to fill two 700-gallon tanks with two snorkel devices that are lowered as the plane flies overhead.

Bomb Fashion

Pressure forces the water into the tanks and the plane flies 40 feet above the fire to drop its pay load, bomb bay fashion, on the flames, Miller said.

"The water comes down like real dense rain and breaks into a cloud-like pattern," Miller said. "But there is enough force to knock you down."

Good performances in the next several days of trial runs could result in a permanent job for the rainmaker, Miller added.

In the Everglades, 366 fires charred 217,000 acres from Jan. 1 to April 11. Statewide, 6,292 blazes have claimed 450,000 acres of grass and timberlands, Miller said.

Mop-up operations were still under way two weeks after a 50,000-acre fire raged in northern Dade County near Everglades National Park. Troops from Homestead Air Force Base joined forestry rangers in fighting the blaze.

10 Days

A 23,000-acre woods fire northwest of the park in Monroe County has burned untended for more than 10 days.

Doctors reported a rapidly increasing number of respiratory disease cases as fires continued to spew dark smoke into southern Florida's Gold Coast area.

Dade County health officials said recent air pollution counts have reached the danger level, even for healthy individuals.

Twelve of 25 patients who visit the Dade-Monroe County Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association for breathing exercises can't attend any longer because they can't leave the safety of their air conditioned homes, a spokesman said.

Quick Wage Hike Proposed

Prompt Action Sought on Raise From $1.60 to $2

By EDMOND LeBRETON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation for a quick increase in the minimum wage from $1.60 to $2 per hour was introduced today by Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., of the House Ways and Means Committee, as another committee opened hearings on a slower raise.

Mills' committee does not handle wage legislation, which is before the House Education and Labor Committee.

He said, however, he made his move to encourage prompt action for a double reason:

—The economy needs the stimulation provided by increased purchasing power.

—The minimum wage directly relates to welfare reform, on which the Ways and Means Committee is working.

Welfare Cost

An increase in the minimum wage, Mills said, would substantially reduce the cost of the proposed new welfare program, which for the first time would provide benefits for the "working poor"—those fully employed but not earning enough to lift their families above the poverty level.

The principal bill before the Education and Labor Committee, sponsored by Rep. John H. Dent, D-Pa., and Chairman Carl D. Perkins, D-Ky., would increase the minimum hourly wage for non-agricultural workers from the present $1.60 to $1.80 next Jan. 1 and $2 Jan. 1, 1973.

Mills' bill would raise the minimum to $2 effective Feb. 1, 1972.

A subcommittee headed by Dent opened hearings today on minimum wage legislation, including measures to increase the minimum to as much as $2.25.

The Labor Department said it does not yet have current figures on how many workers would be affected, but said a survey showed about 8 million were earning less than $2 an hour as of April 1970. The figure probably would be substantially less today because of general wage raises, a spokesman said.

The bill sets a federally financed income level of $2,400 for a family of four.

It also would supplement the earnings of low-paid persons. Counting dependents, about 8 million persons would be affected, the committee said.

Mills said an increase in the minimum wage would reduce the demand for supplementation out of federal funds.

"I consider it a companion measure to the welfare bill," he said.

Jerry Rubin Gets Call to Testify In Harrisburg

UTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Peace activist Jerry Rubin said Monday night that he will testify at the federal trial of the Harrisburg 6, accused in an alleged Washington, D.C., bomb-kidnap plot.

Rubin told a reporter that he had been subpoenaed by the Justice Department to appear at the trial in Harrisburg, Pa., but that he could not discuss any testimony he might give.

The six defendants were indicted on charges of plotting to kidnap presidential aide Henry Kissinger and blow up heating tunnels in the capital. The defendants are the Rev. Philip Berrigan, 47, now serving time in a federal prison for destroying draft records; two other Roman Catholic priests; a nun; a former priest and a graduate student.

Rubin was here to speak at Utica College to raise money for war protests planned for next month in Washington.

3-Year Mayor's Term Voted in Manitowoc

MANITOWOC, Wis. (AP) — The term of Manitowoc's mayor was increased from two to three years, effective in April 1973, by an 11-3 vote of the City Council Monday night.

John L. Krey, who is beginning his second two-year term as mayor, said he was pleased with the move, but would have preferred establishment of a four-year term.

Cutting Top Auto Speed Is Advised

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Transportation Safety Board recommended today the top speed of automobiles be limited to no more than the highest legal speed limit in the nation.

The recommendation is far stronger than any government proposal yet to reduce top speeds on cars.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration proposed Dec. 1, 1970, to curb high speed driving with a device that activates a car's warning lights and horn at a speed of 85 miles an hour or more.

It also recommended limiting the maximum attainable speed to 95 miles an hour and to require speedometers that register no greater than 85. Police vehicles would be exempted but all other cars, trucks, buses and motorcycles built after Oct. 1, 1972, would be affected under the proposal.

Safety Administration

The safety board's recommendation today asked the safety administration to amend its proposal and further reduce speeds attainable on new cars.

The board did not say which state has the highest legal speed limit but several have limits of 75. Nevada has no limits in unpopulated areas.

The board also suggested police enforce existing guidelines limiting the maximum number of persons allowed to ride in the front seats of passenger cars.

The board's recommendations arose out of a study of a two-car collision on the southern approach to the Golden Gate Bridge last July 11, in which 10 out of 12 passengers were killed.

The Transportation Board concluded the cause of the accident was probably excessive speed "which led to loss of vehicle control on the curve of a highway which had substandard lane width and no median barrier . . . ."

Exceed Limit

"The speed . . . which was at least 100 miles per hour preceding the crash, and its (the car's) rated speed capability of 125 to 130 miles per hour, were both far in excess of any legal highway speed limit in the United States."

The board's report said, further, the second car had front seats designed for two persons, but was carrying a total of four persons. "This was in excess of the allowable number of three persons . . . ."

Other recommendations made were:

—The California Division of Highways and other agencies complete their plans to bring the site of the accident up to national standards. Plans include widening the 10-foot lanes to 12 feet and adding acceleration-deceleration lanes and a permanent median barrier.

— The United States Army Sixth Command consider granting right-of-way through the Presidio of San Francisco.

And we think the attention that's being paid to auto safety now is a good thing. Because it will result in better driving for everyone.

And, frankly, better driving for everyone means better business for us.

We say Buick is something to believe in. That's why we're trying to make it easy to be safe by putting in safety features that work by themselves. You don't have to do anything to make them work.

Like side guard beams. And the energy absorbing steering column. And the cargo guard between the trunk and back seat. They start "working" even before you get in the car.

But two safety features, two of the most vital, are worthless unless you do something first.

Seat and shoulder belts.

Unfastened they do nothing. And you've seen enough statistics to know what a difference they can make. So use them.

But that's not all you can do. Because the most effective safety feature of all can't be added to our cars or anybody else's.

That feature is you. And the way you drive.

Which should be defensively. And rested. And sober.

We're all in this together. And together we can solve the auto safety problem once and for all.

And the time is now.

Ambulance Firms Dislike Competing With City

BY BILL KNUTSON
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Appleton's two private ambulance operators fear they will be driven out of business by the fire department.

"Contrary to what they (fire department officials) say, they are in the ambulance business and they are attempting, rather openly, to put us out," said James Welch, owner of Gold Cross Ambulance Service.

"Ultimately, they will succeed," Welch theorized. "No private enterprise can compete with a city."

If the private ambulances should fold, he explained, taxpayers would get tagged with an added half million dollars a year — the cost of more men and equipment that would be needed for an expanded rescue squad operation. The city would need at least five ambulances, Welch said.

Lawrence Seidl, owner of Larry's Ambulance Service, figures he is losing 18 to 20 calls a month to the fire department. At about $25 per in-city call (the same as is charged by the fire department), that would mean the rescue squad is costing Seidl between $450 and $500 a month in business.

"There just isn't enough business here for two private operators and the rescue squad," Seidl felt.

Neither Seidl nor Welch wants the fire department to get out of the rescue business. But they don't want the city running an ambulance. They don't want the rescue squad to be a ride to the hospital.

The fire department has a bus-like van that is equipped for heavy rescue work such as freeing persons trapped in auto wrecks, fire or cave-ins and for major disasters. The bus is known as Squad 2. Seidl and Welch want to see Squad 2 retained because they admit that they cannot match some of the emergency services it is capable of providing.

But they say they can more than match the services provided through the fire department's Squad 1, the light emergency rescue vehicle that the private operators say is really nothing more than an inexpensive ambulance. Fire Chief Roland Kuehnl is attempting to replace Squad 1, a 1968 International Travel-All, with a new, bigger and more expensive Chevrolet van.

"The only reason he wants the new unit is to compete with us," Welch charged. "They have made it quite clear they are going to keep gnawing away."

Welch sees the rescue squad as a $100,000 duplication effort by the city over services provided by the private firms. He said that that is approximately the amount needed each year to operate the rescue squad. Kuehnl said there never was any need to hire more firemen for the rescue squad and he explained that if the squad were dropped, the manpower would be absorbed into the fire fighting service.

Ambulances are not the only sources of income for Seidl and Welch. The also do funeral coach work for Fox Valley funeral homes.

Welch said his coach rental business accounts for about half of his income. Seidl, who has contracts with only three funeral homes, estimated his coach trade comprises only a third of

County Hears Plan to Cut Welfare Costs

Director Proposes Outagamie Investigate Own Facilities

Ray Kaskey, deputy Outagamie County Social Services director, has proposed the county investigate providing its own facilities as a means of reducing costs for cases now sent to state institutions.

The aid to dependent children in institutions program is a "very expensive thing for what we are getting," Kaskey told the county board's finance committee this morning. He said he felt the county could handle most of those cases itself on a group home basis. "I think we have the resources to do it," he said.

County Administrator Alvin Woehler, noting that monthly costs at some of the institutions ran as high as $1,400, asked if it was possible to determine whether the cost was too high for the services performed. What makes the cost so high? he asked.

Kaskey said it was mainly the professional staff. "But I'm not sure the patients are getting all that much help," he said.

"Do we have the facilities to take care of these people?" Supv. Harold Miller, Grand Chute, asked.

Kaskey said the county didn't have sufficient facilities now, but they did have a nucleus with the receiving home, guidance center and social services department staff.

"We have a big need for a place for teen-age girls," he said, in place of sending them all to institutions.

Last year, it cost the county an average of $6,226 for each person in an institution who received aid under the AFDC-I program. This does not include medical costs, Kaskey said.

This compares to about $210 per month for each case under the regular aid to families with dependent children (AFDC) and about $100 per month for children in foster homes. Neither figure includes medical costs.

Kaskey said he could not figure the medical costs in because the state lumps together the medical payments for all categories.

The figures are only the county's share of costs and do not include state and federal aids for the programs.

He said about one-third of the AFDC cases involve divorces but that recently incapacitation of one or the other parents has been the biggest single factor.

Last December there were 298 families receiving AFDC, the largest number for any month during the year. The lowest month was February with 246 families.

New London School Board Discusses Schedule Conflict

NEW LONDON — Questions arose at the board of education and public meeting Monday over the feasibility of the new high school wrestling program.

Several uttered concern that the conference will conduct that sport and basketball the same nights in different towns.

Athletic Director Larry Graves explained the idea was to prevent students from having to be out on a school night and to make it possible to get better officials.

But "frankly," he said, "I wonder if something else won't fill in that night."

Schools Supt. H. J. Ramsdell said he couldn't think of a better place for students to be than at a school function that parents know is being chaperoned.

It was pointed out that the program is on a year trial basis and that the New London district had gone on record in opposition.

Ramsdell did note that it did not seem fair to students that they had to choose which sport to follow, especially if they were fans of both.

Bill Morien, a parent, said wrestling was just beginning to take its place as a major sport, and he questioned whether the dual program might hurt the sport.

County Democrats Will Pay State Membership Dues

BY BILL LEACH
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The Outagamie County Democratic party last week authorized paying 1971 membership dues to the state headquarters. The action came after an organizational vice chairman clarified issues that the county unit had raised in December.

The local unit last December passed a resolution challenging the state party to account for its activities, primarily in financial matters, and voted to withhold dues until satisfactory answers were given.

Mrs. Marjorie Patterson, Oshkosh, organizational vice chairman of the state Democratic party, told the group that a "new concern" in the state administrative branch for count unit priorities and financial accountability had helped rectify differences of opinion between the state and county groups.

She spoke in place of state party chairman H. William Gerrard, who had been invited by the county unit to speak at its meeting Thursday night but was unable to appear.

"We can only make the state party what you people want it to be," Mrs. Patterson told the group. "If we don't hear from you, as often happens, we can't know that you are dissatisfied."

A great item of concern to county units was the irregularity with which financial reports had been sent to them by the state organization. Often, these reports weren't even complete, Mrs. Patterson said.

She emphasized that there had been no misuse of funds or anything illegal in the reporting procedure, but blamed the poor reporting techniques on a lack of concern by administrative committee members and the fact that workers are volunteers for the poor reporting technique.

She promised a better, regular schedule for the reports and said the budget would be sent to the county units for perusal in December. Mrs. Patterson added that checks for county refunds for the first quarter had been made out and should be sent out next week.

"Financial management is in new and more demanding hands, now," the vice chairman said, assuring that financial accountability difficulties had been reasonably overcome.

Emphasizing this, she said that the Milwaukee County unit's dues-paying procedure had been straightened out and the party headquarters there was functioning at a renewed pace.

Appleton Girl Dies of Injuries

Mary Fullarton, 12, Was Struck by Car Last Tuesday

A 12-year-old Appleton girl died early today of injuries she received a week ago when struck by an automobile in the Town of Grand Chute.

She is Mary Fullarton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. Fullarton, 1323 W. Second St. She sustained severe head injuries and fractured left arm and pelvis in the accident that occurred on Outagamie County Trunk V, 1½ miles west of Appleton, last Tuesday afternoon.

Her death raises the 1971 traffic fatality toll in Outagamie County to five, compared with eight on this date a year ago. Coroner Bernard H. Kemps ruled the girl's death a result of the accident injuries.

The driver of the car, Victoria J. Anderson, 21, of 1220 County Trunk S, Neenah, told county police she was westbound on V when the Fullarton girl jumped into the path of her car while walking with a group of other girls.

The girl had been in the intensive care unit of St. Elizabeth Hospital where she died about 4 a.m. today.

She was a seventh grade student at St. Joseph School. Funeral arrangements will be handled through the Ellenbecker-Andersen Funeral Home.

State History to be Told Differently

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Official state historical works, according to Dr. Andrew Clark, professor of historical geography at the University of Wisconsin, are ordinarily a mixed lot of the trivial and tedious, but Wisconsin's will be different.

State histories, he explained are usually either "bright journalistic surveys full of emotional promotions" or factual, dry and tedious.

A member of the advisory committee for the preparation of the six-volume official state history of Wisconsin, Dr. Clark explained recently that Wisconsin set its sights on a different kind of history, a record that would be "so thorough it would be definitive," but also clear and interesting enough that it would "communicate broadly" to most adult readers.

The history project, under the auspices of the State Historical Society has been underway since H. M. Benstead and the Western Publishing Co. of Racine, offered a $15,000 grant to the society in 1963 to plan a comprehensive, accurate and readable history.

The first volume in the series is expected to be completed and published within the next two years and be distributed to all public libraries, and public junior and senior high schools.

A Pace-Setter

While the Wisconsin history will be a local artifact, and of special interest to this state's resident, the series is expected to be the pacesetter for history works in other states.

With the planning funds and $319,000 raised from industry and labor, the project got under way in 1965. Dr. William Thompson a former history professor at Oshkosh State University was named general editor. A research staff of historians was assembled to gather new materials for the authors. The collections have developed into a huge data bank of statistical information that will be available to scholars and spin-off history projects.

Among the more than 20 Wisconsin companies and foundations that have supported the project are seven sponsors in the Fox Valley. They are Appleton Coated Paper Co., Appleton; George Banta Co., Menasha; Outagamie Corp.; Thilco Foundation, Kaukauna; Wisconsin Michigan Power Co., Appleton Bergstrom Foundation, Neenah; Kimberly-Clark Foundation, Neenah.

The background work that is necessary for any thorough history was only the beginning.

6 Writers

The actual writing of the volumes, an effort that will make the project distinctive according to historical society officials, will be done by six internationally known historians.

Those selected for this are Alice E. Smith, resident scholar at the Wisconsin State Historical Society; Richard N. Current, distinguished professor of history, University of North Carolina at Greensboro; Robert C. Nesbit, professor of history, University of Wisconsin: E. David Cronon, professor of history and director of the Institute for Research in the Humanities, University of Wisconsin; Paul W. Glad, professor of history, University of Wisconsin, and Thompson.

The authors were "corraled," in Clark's description, and have begun the lengthy process of writing. Some of their efforts are completed in manuscript form, ready to be edited and published, while others are still in the preliminary stages of production. The whole series will be released as each is completed.

A progress report on the project was recently presented to the Senate Education Committee which has been requested to find $50,000 so the books can be distributed to more than 1,000 schools and libraries throughout the state.

The committee has taken no action on the request but has suggested that State Department of Public Instruction funds earmarked for library purchases be tapped for the project. Sen. Ernest C. Keppler, R-Sheboygan, the Senate majority chairman, supported the project in an appearance before the committee. Keppler said that too little money has been spent to preserve the past and that the history project is probably the most appropriate way to make up for the oversight. He proposed a cigarette tax increase as a possible way to raise the funds.

With or without approval of distribution funds, the books will be published, and Wisconsin will have its own history. This, its sponsors predict, will be of historical significance itself.

Plans Are in Process For Historical Meeting

Mr. and Mrs. George Howden, 28 River Drive, are co-chairmen of the planning committee for the 1971 meeting of the Winnebagoland region of Wisconsin local historical societies June 26 in Appleton.

The Outagamie County Historical Society is host to the 19 regional societies affiliated with the State Historical Society of Wisconsin. The annual meeting will be an all-day event, highlighted by a luncheon and program.

Plans to date include a guided bus tour to historical spots in the For River area, the presentation of the Outagamie society's Centennial Year Picture Gallery, window displays on a historical theme and a program of reports from the various historical groups.

A special feature will be the dedication of an Appleton landmark site with Dr. Stephen S. Darling and Lillian Mackesy in charge of the research. The marker will be an official landmark of the State Historical Society.

Outagamie Society President Francis Sumnicht will announce the landmark site as soon as it has been made official by the state organization and its historical landmark sites committee.

Appointed to various work committees were Otto Hansen, finance officer; Cecil Furminger, meals and meeting place; Dr. Darling, historical tour; Armin Knoke and Howden, window displays; Herbert H. Helble, regional meeting program; Sumnicht and Knoke, invitations and attendance.

Waupaca Day Care Services to Get Grant

CLINTONVILLE — The Waupaca County Community Day Care Services' application for grant-in-aid funds has been approved by the State Department of Health and Social Services, effective April 1.

The grant-in-aid will cover 40 per cent of the operating cost for the mentally handicapped in four day care centers in Waupaca County. The Waupaca County Association for Retarded Children, sponsors of the services, has been paying all the expenses of the centers through money received from house-to-house campaigns and United Fund drives and donations.

At its last meeting, the Day Care board decided to have six hours per week at each center in its 1972-73 budget. Because more money is needed to finance the expanded program, the board of directors is working with the County Social Services Department to obtain purchase of services for the mentally handicapped. Purchase of services offers new funding opportunities for Day Care programs from county, state and federal funds.

The day care service board of directors consisting of nine members was appointed Feb. 14, 1970 by the Waupaca County Association for Retarded Children.

At this time, Mrs. Tony Buhr, Marion, and Mrs. Violet Viitanen, Clintonville, volunteered to work on the application for the state grant-in-aid. Many standards had to be met to qualify under the Community Day Care Services Act.

The Day Care board, which meets once a month, is responsible for the operation and administration of the Day Care programs. The first budget was presented with the application. In August, 1970, Mrs. Buhr was appointed County Day Care director.

The new Clintonville nursery program started April 13 at the United Methodist Church, with Mrs. Henry Kroll in charge. Any child in Waupaca County who qualifies may attend either the Waupaca Center or the new Clintonville Nursery Center.

The center at Waupaca meets from 9:30 to 11:30 Tuesdays and Thursdays at the United Methodist Church with Miss Margaret Hiller and Mrs. Margaret Schroeder in charge.

A typical nursery program includes the development of self-care skills, organized play, arts and crafts, music and rhythmic activities, safety habits, rest and lunch periods. The preschool program is designed to prepare the child for a special education classroom.

The work activity program in Clintonville came under the Day Care control Jan. 1, 1971. It has been in operation for six years and meets at the Masonic Temple on Monday and Wednesday afternoons. Mrs. Gust Ridderbush and Mrs. Paul Gluth are in charge of the rug making and crafts, which are the main activity.

The New London activity center was organized in June, 1970, and operates Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at the Congregational Church. Some of the activities at the New London center are arts and crafts, games, singing and dancing, and bowling once a month. Each session ends with a lunch. Larger quarters are needed for the New London center. Mrs. Lula Mae Lotza and Mrs. Alyce Obertin are in charge.

The activity programs in Clintonville and New London are for the mentally handicapped over 16 years of age, and open to anyone in the county.

Many volunteers throughout the county help make these programs a success, according to Mrs. Willis Gensler, Clintonville, publicity chairman.

Anyone wishing to donate equipment or money for any of these centers may contact Mrs. Buhr.

The next Day Care board meeting will be at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Activity Center in the Masonic Temple, Clintonville.

Of Women Found With VD, 85 Per Cent Didn't Know

BY G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

The two principal forms of venereal disease (although there are lesser ones) are syphilis ("Siff") and gonorrhea, more usually called "the clap".

Syphilis is the more destructive, but gonorrhea is about 20 times as prevalent. Untreated gonorrhea can make men and women sterile; cause prostate trouble, lead to many serious "female operations," and cause arthritis and heart disease.

Gonorrhea can, in short, cause lifelong misery.

Yet the disease can be cut short, usually in a week or so, with penicillin.

Then why aren't people being treated instead of passing the disease along at such an explosive rate?

Well, partly because too many, especially the younger ones, don't know the facts. Or they think that "a shot of penicillin will cure it, so why worry?"

But it is partly for a more sinister reason. Leonard H. Shapiro, M.D., of the Philadelphia health department, shocked doctors recently when he gave the Sandoz Postgraduate Medical Lecture at Hanover, N.J.

That is, he shocked those who weren't already actively involved in VD clinic work.

No Symptoms

Of women treated by the Philadelphia department for gonorrhea, he said, 85 per cent had no symptoms!

All over the country, other clinics since have told me that their statistics are similar: These women didn't know they had — and were giving — the infection. No doctor could tell just by looking at them. So obviously their male partners couldn't.

"This," said Dr. Shapiro, "is the reservoir of infection that we must eradicate."

In the male, the infection usually is quite apparent. Any time up to about two weeks after being infected, the man begins having trouble (usually in three to five days). Urination is burning and painful, and he begins discharging yellow pus. Neither he nor the doctor has any doubt about what ails him — although if need be, a smear from the pus will be easily identified in the laboratory.

Dr. Thosteson

If the man isn't a skunk, he avoids any further contact until he has been cured. (It is possible for him to spread the disease before he knows that he has it, however, so a "swinger" can start new trails of infection in short order.)

Anyway, we probably cure a fairly good proportion of the infected males — but what about those females who don't know they have gonorrhea? Can they be tested?

Yes, they can, but taking a "smear" from the vagina and looking at it under the microscope will NOT show many cases.

As Dr. Shapiro emphasized in his Sandoz Lecture, a better test is needed for them. Fortunately there is one — although he himself didn't believe his own eyes at first.

Accurate Test

"I couldn't believe the statistics," he said. "When I would tell them that last week's culture was read as positive and they did have gonorrhea, they were almost as shocked as I was."

The accurate test is a culture — in the female, the gonorrhea germ tends to congregate at the cervix, some inches up in the vagina at the entrance to the womb. A sampling of the surface fluids must be taken there, then grown in a laboratory culture for a couple of days. Then at last the germ, if present, can be reliably identified.

We doctors MUST quit relying on smear tests. The young public also must learn that cultures, not smears, are necessary for women.

More about this in a later article in my booklet, "Venereal Disease: How to Avoid it, How to Cure it." But for the moment, this is the lesson that has to be taught and learned:

Gonorrhea is being spread in large part by women who don't know they have the infection.

(Tomorrow — "How VD is Detected")

(Copyright 1971)

How does VD start? Why are teenagers among the most frequent victims? Will it cure itself? For answers, write Dr. Thosteson in care of The Post-Crescent for his booklet, "Venereal Disease: How To Avoid It; How To Cure It". Be sure to enclose 35 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

Eligibility Card Renewal for Judicare Starts on May 1

Current eligibility cards will expire May 31 for Wisconsin Judicare, the program of legal assistance to the poor in the 28 northern counties of the state. Shawano and Menominee counties are included in the program.

Judicare will begin to renew these cards on May 1. Affidavits for renewal are being mailed to all current cardholders. Persons who continue to qualify for Judicare must complete the affidavit and have it notarized. The new, orange cards will be mailed by the Madison office beginning May 14. They will be good through May 31, 1972.

Welfare departments and community action agencies in the 28 Judicare counties also will begin issuing orange eligibility cards after May 14. Wisconsin residents who are eligible may go to the lawyer of their choice in their county or an adjacent Judicare county to receive civil legal services under the program. Judicare pays the lawyer at a reduced fee under the schedule of attorney's fees and costs in Judicare matters. The balance of the fee is the lawyer's contribution to the Judicare program. There is no charge to the client.

To be eligible for Judicare, a family of three may earn up to $3,540 after taxes and Social Security are deducted. For a family of six, the maximum allowable income is $5,410.

Wisconsin Judicare is a federally funded program administered through the Wisconsin Bar Association.

Judge Revokes Probation and Sentences Youth

WAUPACA — A Waupaca youth who was on probation for a malt beverage incident Monday had that probation revoked after he pleaded guilty to burglary and theft of the Waupaca City Shops and was sentenced to the Waupaca County jail on the original charges.

Dean J. Erdman, 19, 110 N. State St., was placed on probation for 18 months on March 8 for the malt beverage charges. That probation was broken March 21 with the burglary and theft of the Waupaca City Shops. He pleaded guilty to those charges in county court branch 2 on March 29.

Monday, when Judge Nathan Wiese revoked the original probation, he sentenced Erdman to six months in the Waupaca County Jail on the charge of furnishing malt beverage to minors; two months for off-premises possession of malt beverage; and six months for contributing to the delinquency of minors.

The sentences are to run concurrently.

The Role of the Local Draft Board

The primary role of local draft boards is to carry out national Selective Service policy in the interest of national security. This means putting young men into the pool for military induction.

Theirs is a job where there's no room for emotion. They must be fair and to be fair they must adhere to a local policy generally guided by national requirements.

Even their exceptions — where deferments are granted — are covered by policy. The local board — Outagamie County Selective Service Board No. 53 — has granted deferments only for hardships and conscientious objection.

The job becomes somewhat subjective in interpretation of whether an individual's case falls into a deferment category. But cases outside these two deferment areas are fairly cut and dried.

This, however, doesn't keep draft board members from being criticized for decisions. And probably some decisions are difficult to understand because the details are available only to the individual and the board.

There was a recent case in Appleton of a Hortonville man who sought an extension of his Peace Corps deferment to finish his work of building a hydroelectric plant in a small Ecuador town. The board had denied his original Peace Corps deferment request but he got a one-year postponement from the Presidential Appeals Board. Last month, the local board stuck to its policy and denied the renewal request.

From a letter the young man wrote, one can't help but sympathize with his plight. He is an engineering graduate whose skill is important to the hydroelectric plant construction and the welfare of a people.

One would think that the board could defer the young man until next fall for such a worthy cause. It could but it would be violating its policy and opening the door to other similar requests which it couldn't deny.

Pure Milk Votes to Merge

Delegates for the state's largest dairy bargaining cooperative, Pure Milk Products Cooperative, Fond du Lac, voted recently to merge with an umbrella organization, Associated Milk Producers Inc.

Associated essentially is a bargaining organization which has absorbed operating co-ops which manufacture dairy products. It is the nation's largest regional dairy co-op and sweeps from headquarters in San Antonio, Texas, to Canada.

Leaders of the combined organization have said the merger increases their legislative power. They promise more services to members.

The two co-ops wed, however, in the midst of turmoil between giant dairy cooperatives.

Land O' Lakes Inc., powerful marketing organization at Minneapolis, collided head-on in Washington with Associated representatives in disputes over milk price support levels.

Land O' Lakes officials indicated higher support prices would result in decreased milk use, losses to milk plants, creation of government surpluses and growing government spending which they said aggravate present problems.

They called for completely new federal dairy policies and advised against increasing federal spending.

Associated violently attacked the Land O' Lakes position, throwing its legislative power behind a successful move to increase price support levels.

Their general position was that government price aids will help dairymen to build secure marketing structures and protect dairy farmer income.

History shows Secretary of Agriculture Clifford Hardin raised the price support level for milk.

Yet bitterness remains between the organizations. Philosophical disputes between two such powerful units can result in severe marketing disruptions. In the end the main loser in the battle is the dairy farmer — regardless which organization carries the field.

Perhaps it is time leaders of both organizations remember cooperation is the reason their groups exist.

Explain Public Statistics to Public

The White House and the Department of Labor have trapped themselves in one of those silly bureaucratic jangles, in which it is difficult to explain what was trying to be accomplished in the first place, in the decision to forbid official explanations by the Bureau of Labor Statistics on periodic reports on unemployment and the state of the economy.

A few days ago, a report of the bureau said that unemployment had climbed back up to six per cent of the national labor force in March. This represented a percentage reversal of a decline in January and February. Actually, the 5.2 million total of unemployed was 270,000 less than in February, but the six per cent figure is based on the fact that the numerical decline was less than normal for the spring of the year.

At least, that is how the whole thing is pieced together. The Bureau of Labor Statistics because of the silencing order wasn't allowed to interpret the figures for the public. The order, as near as can be figured out, apparently came from a conflict in language after the bureau's February report on unemployment.

At that time, Labor Secretary James Hodgson appeared at a White House briefing and termed a .2 per cent decline in unemployment of "great significance." But back at the Labor Department, Harold Goldstein, director of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, was saying in another briefing on the same report that the decline was only "marginally significant."

That economic data is subject to differing interpretations hardly comes under the heading of news. And a case can be made for a Nixon administration concern that career people in the Department of Labor may not have the same motivation for building a step by step reduction of unemployment as does the White House with the 1972 election in mind.

But this misses the main points. In the first place, these statistics are gathered by the government for public purposes, and the public has a right to the fullest explanations possible. In the second place, the statistics are the foundation for decisions being made by individual businesses. They should have not only the bare statistics but professional and governmental interpretation of them. If there is conflict in the interpretations, the public and the business community also should get that before making judgments.

Then, there is the political fall-out from the silencing order. Wisconsin Sen. William Proxmire, chairman of the Joint House-Senate Economic Committee, has said he intends to get Bureau of Labor Statistics spokesmen before the group to be questioned on the monthly reports. The same information then will finally get to the public, though perhaps laced with partisan politics.

There was no good reason for the muzzling order in the first place. It should be discontinued.

"IF YOU'LL JUST LET HIM GET CLOSER HE MIGHT STOP GROWLING."

Rep. McCloskey May be Strong Primary Opponent for President

BY KEVIN P. PHILLIPS

WASHINGTON — When spring rolls around in upper New England next year, more than maple sugar pots may be coming to a boil. There is a good chance the March New Hampshire primary will see President Nixon square off personally against a liberal GOP challenger, the first such White House combat of the electronic era.

If so, it will be an event of major importance, a sharp conflict of political values and styles. For Mr. Nixon, the result could be anything from rejuvenation to overexposure or even catastrophe.

The President's most likely opponent is California Congressman Paul N. McCloskey, who will attack on the one issue that drives him like a turbine — the war in Indochina. McCloskey is putting together an advisory group on the other main issue — the economy — but he acknowledges minimal expertise.

Even if the President's Indochinese withdrawal policy is beginning to show results that ease public apprehension, McCloskey — who is unlikely to be dissuaded by anything short of a bombing halt — can still raise powerful issues.

Marine Reservist

First, the California Congressman is an unusual dove — a greying, close-cropped colonel in the U.S. Marine Reserve, a Navy Cross and Silver Star winner who, during the mid- 1960s, was officer-in-command of the Marine Corps Counter-Insurgency School.

"Originally," says McCloskey, "my opposition to the war was based on the fact that we couldn't win it. It was a military appraisal."

McCloskey is particularly critical of President Nixon's reliance on the counter-insurgency advice of Britain's Sir Robert Thompson, who crushed the Communists 20 years ago in Malaya (now Malaysia). McCloskey intends to argue that the Malayan situation, where the Moslem Malay villagers hated the (Chinese ethnic group) Communists, is not at all comparable to Indochina, where the villagers sympathize with the Communists, and that President Nixon's misguided Thompsonism has wastefully prolonged an unwinnable war.

McCloskey also intends to press hard on the issue of the U.S. aerial "cluster bombing" of Laotian villages. He has scrapbooks of crayon pictures, drawn by Laotian women and children, of villages left a shambles by U.S. airpower.

The California Congressman has also researched the similarity of U.S. civilian "resettlement" practices to war crimes for which Nazi generals received death sentences at the Nuremberg trials. Remember that these are not the arguments of an easily maligned bearded pacifist, but of a Marine hero who won the Navy Cross in a Korean War bayonet charge.

Politically Naive

McCloskey is not a punchy speaker. His points wander into abstraction, and he has a self-acknowledged tendency to utter politically naive remarks that could make damaging headlines. But he is sincere and candid, and outspokenness is a good selling point in Yankee New England.

He says: "I regard lack of candor — the deliberate deception practiced by the White House — as a major issue. Either Reagan or a liberal Republican would be more straightforward."

This ploy could serve McCloskey well. Even if President Nixon eased public concern about Indochina, his administration's image, in both domestic and foreign policy, is partly one of opportunism and public relations gimmickry. Not only liberals have been alienated.

Analyses of the 1968 New Hampshire primary show that many conservative Democrats voted for dove Eugene McCarthy simply to protest against President Johnson, and McCloskey, by emphasizing the candor issue, may collect a "protest" slice of the conservative GOP electorate that is unhappy with Nixon's policies.

Nixon Well-Known

Rep. McCloskey could also profit from the enthusiastic volunteers among New England's large cadres of college students, as well as from crackerbarrel country reaction to President Nixon's inflated entourage of advertising men and electronic image merchants.

Of course, no one should underestimate Nixon's New Hamphire drawing power. He has campaigned there so many times that he knows hundreds of selectmen, postmistresses and storekeepers by name. Besides this, he will have most of the state Republican organization, plus the support of the right-wing Manchester Union-Leader, the state's largest newspaper. Just last month, Mr. Nixon buoyed his prospects by rescinding the old Secretary McNamara order to close the Portsmouth Navy Yard, a vital institution there.

At the same time, though, for all his past New Hampshire exposure and success, Mr. Nixon has never really faced serious opposition; certainly not in either 1960 or 1968. Next year, with the eyes of the nation focused on New Hampshire, McCloskey could poll as much as 30-35 per cent of the vote. This would not look good for Nixon, and it is a possibility the White House should bear in mind.

Wisconsin Report

'Local Option' on Beer Drinking No Aid in Safety Work

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Probably the vast majority of the observant citizens of Wisconsin are aware of the incompatibility of inconsistent age rules for the consumption of beer with the goal of safe highways. The

Wyngaard

"beer islands" which attract young beer drinkers from their own jurisdictions with the aid of the ubiquitous automobile pose a hazard that no one can seriously dispute, if there is the slightest awareness of the morbid highway accident and mortality story.

But there is an equal likelihood that comparatively few persons understand precisely why the legislature has been unable to establish a uniform beer drinking age in spite of the endless discussion and disputation and the overwhelming conviction of earnest and concerned citizens that such uniformity is one of the most compelling needs for improvement of traffic safety.

The issue is presented against with the publication of the recommendations for new highway safety improvement measures drafted by a conscientious task force invited to survey the matter by Gov. Patrick Lucey.

The majority report asks for a uniform statewide rule of 18 years as the most satisfactory method of resolving the problem. It rejects other age tests as impracticable because of legislative "considerations," which means that the members concluded that an age 19, 20, or 21 rule (as for liquor) would be fatally resisted.

Other "Considerations"

While the group claims understanding of the legislative psyche (and the clout of pressure groups), it ignores equally obvious "legislative considerations" that militate against an 18-year rule. For the 18-year-old benchmark is not feasible unless it is imposed statewide.

As the report concedes, that means the elimination of "local option." And that is precisely where the shoe will pinch fatally.

"Local option" means the right of local government to make its own rules about the availability of beer as an intoxicant with respect to age. Under present and traditional law, localities use that option through the simple exercise of their right to decide whether to issue beer bar licenses or to withhold them altogether.

About 60 per cent of the population is now governed by municipalities that have used that option to refuse to license beer bars to sell to 18-year-olds. That is a fair test of the will of the people.

Is the legislature likely to accept the counsel of the Lucey advisers and get rid of the "local option?" There is scarcely any chance. And thus the "solution" to the beer island problem of the new study group will again be illusory.

Ironies of Conflict

There are ironies involved in this tangle. The major beer prohibition in Wisconsin as applied to youth is Milwaukee, which does not license beer bars for patrons of less than 21 but which sends to the legislature lobbyists of its major industry to protest such rules for other localities and legislators who feel that the rules that govern their home districts somehow are not wise for the rest of the state.

Milwaukee sends men to the legislature who are among the most eager champions of reducing the age for voting. Old enough to fight, old enough to vote, they insist. But they are not likely to respond, on the basis of long previous performance, to the slogan the idea that a person who is old enough to vote, is also old enough for beer.

Given the 60 per cent of the electorate that lives with seeming acceptance of 21-year-old beer drinking laws (not to mention the scattered localities that have prohibition by local ordinance), it may be that the uniformity goal is best attained through a statewide 21-year rule by state fiat. But that would smack of prohibition and is not likely to get much support from a Democratic state regime. It would also fly in the face of logic at a time of eager clamor for age 18 as the test of maturity in its most important context — eligibility for the ballot.

Strictly Personal

Tragic Endings Often Have Tiny Beginnings

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Of all the corny old proverbs, the one I happen to prefer most is the ancient British jingle that begins, "For want of a nail, a shoe was lost . . ." and so on, to the loss of a kingdom. It reminds us how tragic endings have their origin in tiny beginnings, and how strong the personal and contingent elements are in what we call "history."

The emphasis of Marx and other "determinists" on economic and political factors in shaping the course of nations has always seemed to me to slight the psychological and moral strands that are just as important. If Hitler had been a successful painter, for instance, instead of a failure, he might still be daubing away in Munich.

R. F. Harrod makes something of a similar point, in his biography of John Maynard Keynes, which I happen to be reading at the moment. In 1906, Keynes took his Civil Service examination, and came in second. The first man on the list chose the Treasury Department, and Keynes was left with the India Office.

Harrod then speculates on the possibilities if Keynes had come in first and gone to the British Treasury Department instead. It is not at all unlikely that the whole course of modern European history might have been altered by this one examination.

At the Treasury, Keynes would doubtless have risen to the top, as he did elsewhere. Had he risen to the top he would have had much more influence in the Peace Treaty terminating World War I, and in the German Reparations Bill, which he bitterly opposed to no effect.

This would have been his first chance to change history: if Germany had not been so stupidly and wickedly treated after World War I, it would not have provided the fertile soil for the cancer of nazism. It was the Treaty of Versailles that gave Hitler his first handle.

Even later, if Keynes had been Winston Churchill's chief economic adviser when Churchill was Chancellor of the Exchequer in the crucial 1920s, it is possibble that the great Depression of 1929 might have been averted by Great Britain and the U.S. In this case, another powerful factor that swept Hitler into office would have been lacking, and World War II might have been avoided.

None of this is too fanciful — Harrod, who suggests it, is a sober and responsible economist, not a flighty literary man — and the whole course of the last 50 years of Western history may very well have hinged on Keynes, obtaining a first instead of a second in an examination he neither took very seriously nor worked very hard on. Certainly his subsequent influence on Franklin Rossevelt and the New Deal indicates that his ideas could change the tide of nations.

What Others Are Saying

We Can be Too Cautious

From Chicago Daily News

Some weeks ago, five college kids rigged a make-believe bomb, complete with a big fuse sticking out the top, and lugged it all over Washington. They played catch with it on the Capitol steps, "planted" it in front of the Lincoln Memorial, and carried it to the top of the Washington Monument, all without anybody trying to stop them. "If somebody wants to do it for real, I think they still can," one of them said. "It was that easy."

There are a lot of places in the world where it is less easy. The chances of succeeding with such a "lark" in Moscow, East Berlin, Prague, Peking, Belgrade or Lisbon would be slight, we suspect.

And of course with a bomb recently exploded in a Capitol washroom and the streets of Washington a jungle, security in our own capital is becoming an increasing problem.

But we do not find it alarming that a group of college kids can pull a scare prank on the Capitol steps without blowing up a storm.

Decency and mutual trust are still the order of the day; there is need for prudence, but not for panic. If that time comes — if one day we have to ring our monuments with police around the clock — that will be a new and infinitely sadder phase of our national life. Let us approach it as gradually as we can.

Lucey Admits Concern Over Pollution Fight Economics

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — While telling the legislature today that he wants a stepped up fight against environmental pollution and damage in all its aspects Gov. Patrick J. Lucey acknowledged his concern that the goals of an environmental cleanup may have an adverse effect upon the state's economy, at least in the short range.

Perhaps to the surprise of much of the Wisconsin business community, the governor told legislators of what he called a "dilemma" — the need for more regulation of the pollution aspects of industrial and other production and the "inhumanity of putting people out of work or making Wisconsin such an uneconomical location that new jobs will not be created."

(The St. Regis Paper Company has recently said that it may be required to close its Rhinelander production plant, with a considerable loss of jobs in that community, if it is required to comply immediately with pollution control instalations ordered by the state department of Natural Resources under present water pollution laws. )

The governor said he wants to be certain that the state requires everything that Wisconsin industry is capable of delivering in compliance with the prohibition against air and water pollution, and cited present law exempting abatement equipment from assessment for property taxes as a precedent.

"This is not enough, however," he said, adding that he is asking informed state agencies for suggestions on additional incentives.

He suggested as a possibility, local bonding authority to build abatement improvements and their lease to business corporations. That would in effect finance abatement equipment at tax exempt rates, he explained.

Lucey made no other explicit suggestions, but he suggested legislation that "would direct the department of natural resources to consider both the economic and environmental effects of pollution abatement orders.

He said financial evidence would be required to be evaluated by independent consultants, and should be treated as confidential for the benefit of the industry.

"I believe this measure will help the state and industry reach agreements on pollution abatement efforts," he said.

DNR has frequently encountered heavy resistance and complaints from industrial corporations that maintain their costs would make their operations economically difficult or impossible if they complied immediately and totally with its clean-up orders, especially in water cases but increasingly also in power generation controversies.

Rejects University Projects

OSU Swim Pool 'Frills' Hit by Commission

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — University construction programs, especially those involving physical education-recreation facilities, were hard hit Monday by the State Building Commission.

By a 5 to 3 vote the commission recommended to the Joint Finance Committee and the legislature that the $1.8 million second phase of the physical education complex at Oshkosh State University be postponed; it rescinded its approval last Friday of a $2.8 million facility for the Shorewood campus of the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay, and endorsed delay on construction of a $5.7 million building on the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee campus.

The three projects were lumped together and deferred, after Sen. Milo Knutson, R-La Crosse, attacked the proposed Oshkosh swimming pool addition as too elaborate with "quite a bit of gingerbread." He also told the commission that the facility would be more appropriate to the La Crosse campus, if it were to be built at all, as there are about 1,900 in physical education here, as opposed to about 500 at Oshkosh.

Knutson proposed that the commission approve the plan, but trim the budget for it to $1.5 million, and Eugene Mc Phee, executive director of the state universities system, agreed to that plan. But, as discussion revealed other opponents to the project, the three gym facilities were lumped together and deferred.

"I think when we are cutting health services to veterans and some welfare programs, I think we have our values mixed up," Knutson said of the proposed gyms, before changing his motion to recommend deferral of the projects.

"As I read the mood of the people today, this is no time to be building swimming pools," Sen. Robert Knowles, R-New Richmond, said. He added that the proposed buildings are "probably not a frill, probably something needed," but said he would favor deferral.

Voting for the deferral recommendation were Gov. Patrick Lucey, commission chairman; Joe Nusbaum, Secretary of the Department of Administration and a commission member; Sens. Knutson and Knowles and Rep. Herbert Schowalter, R-Saukville. Favoring construction of the facilities were Sen. Fred Risser, D-Madison, and Reps. Alvin Baldus, D-Menomonie, and Cletus Vanderperren, D-Green Bay.

Too Lavish

Knutson detailed and attacked the plans for the Oshkosh building as too lavish. He said that the proposed eight-lane Olympic pool would replace a five-lane pool that is only one inch short of regulation length. Competitive swimmers, he said, as a result must put their hands up on completion of a race, rather than simply touching the end of the pool. He said that permanent seats would hold more observers than those at the University of Wisconsin-Madison natatorium and cited spotlights, stainless steel starting blocks, an underwater observation area and hairdryers for men as "gingerbread."

The La Crosse Republican's proposal that the budget for the addition that was left out of the present physical education building plan at Oshkosh when bids for the building were over the sum allocated in the last biennium, be reduced to force elimination of the frills was attacked as "tying the hands" of the commission by Rep. Baludus.

Baludus indicated he would rather defer the gym, than cut its budget too low.

The physical education facilities on the Green Bay campus, planned to replace the small gym at the Deckner Avenue campus that will be released within the next two years, drew only passing comment Friday, as part of a five-building package for the new university.

Knutson, who had voted against the plan last week formally objected to the Green Bay gym Monday. He said there was no reason why the university could not continue to use the Deckner facilities after the building is relinquished to the University Extension, and cited the UW Board of Regents opposition to the proposal as support for his position.

Rep. Cletus Vanderperren, D-Green Bay, challenged Knutson's assessment of the Green Bay facilities, and voted against deferral. "The building they have was created for a very small enrollment," Vanderperren said. There are, he indicated, six times as many students at Green Bay now as the Deckner gym was designed to serve. He also noted that the Deckner gym is a considerable distance from the Shorewood campus where the full educational program will be conducted when the Deckner building is released.

When the deferral was passed, Vanderperren declined to seek a reconsideration of the Green Bay project, indicating that his "no" vote was recorded and adequate at the Building Commission stage of the approval process.

Final Appeals Judge Heads Defenders Too

Move to Arouse Calley Sympathy Compromises President's Position

BY ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — On the evening of March 31, as he prepared to intervene in the Calley case, President Nixon was on the long distance telephone from San Clemente not only checking Congressional sentiment but actualy seeking to whip up opposition to the court martial verdict.

That puts Mr. Nixon in an even more compromising position than he previously had seemed to hold. The incredible fact is that three days before his announcement that he personally would review the murder conviction of Lt. William L. Calley, Jr., he was promoting Congressional speeches in Calley's behalf. In effect, the final appeals judge is also the top defense attorney.

On March 31, two days after Calley's conviction, Mr. Nixon began heavy use of the long distance telephone — as he frequently does when away from the White House. We earlier reported his call to House Minority leader Gerald Ford asking for a check of Congressional sentiment. Even more shocking was a call that same evening to a powerful committee chairman in the House: a conservative Democrat who has been an outspoken Vietnam hawk.

"What do you think about the Calley case?" asked the President.

The Congressman replied that Calley was a pathetic case and probably should never have been an officer. Nevertheless, the chairman told the President, he always had been against the court martial proceedings. Now, he favored a sentence much more lenient than life imprisonment.

"Well, then," replied the President, "why don't you get out and talk that up with some of the other members?"

The conclusion drawn by the chairman: the President had decided to grant clemency and wanted influential figures on Capitol Hill to whip up sentiment for that move among their colleagues. Willing to help, the chairman told a meeting of Democratic deputy whips the next day that "high officials" were moving toward clemency for Calley.

Thus, Mr. Nixon did not merely respond to Congressional uproar over the Calley verdict. Having made a decision for intervention which has profoundly shocked the Army officer corps, he then helped build the uproar as a pretext for intervention.

Muskie's Politician

John F. (Jack) English, Democratic National Committeeman from New York, quietly slipped into a fulltime niche at Sen. Edmund S. Muskie's Presidential campaign headquarters in Washington last Tuesday — thereby filling a need there for an experienced professional politician and, at the same time, making an organized drive for the nomination by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy seem all the more improbable.

English served both of Kennedy's older brothers and is also close to Ted. When Muskie's men first asked him aboard last December, English went to Stephen Smith, Kennedy's older brothers and is paign manager. Hold tight for a while, said Smith. More recently, when English decided to join Muskie, Smith asked him to delay still another week. Finally, Smith implied there was no use waiting any longer. English is convinced Kennedy will make no move.

Crewcut, aggressive Jack English, 44, is badly needed by a Muskie campaign heavy on policymakers and short on politicians. His nationwide contacts with Democratic professionals are excellent. But the Muskie camp may be disappointed in its hopes that English, who supported first Robert F. Kennedy and then Eugene McCarthy in 1968, can help it with the party's left wing. What little credit English had with the left probably vanished when he signed with Muskie.

A footnote: English commuting to Washington from his Long Island home, will work on a national level and keep clear of the tangled New York picture.

Telephone Troubles

The latest gimmick dreamed up by anti-war extremist Rennie Davis in his campaign to disrupt the Federal government May 3-7: all government employees should leave their phones off the hook to disrupt communications.

Davis suggested that in a speech April 8 to some 300 employees of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Before that, Davis had talked about closing entrances to Federal buildings and a sit-in on the White House lawn.

Although the People's Coalition for Peace and Justice sponsoring the May 3-7 demonstrations has called for nonviolence, it will have trouble controlling Davis and his followers who say they are prepared for violence.

Several Pertinent Tips On How to Stay Alive

BY SYLVIA PORTER

Test your chances of staying alive:

How often do you exercise? Daily, three times a week, weekends only, rarely or never?

How much do you smoke? Not at all, five cigarettes a day, one-half to a pack, two packs or more?

What's your weight as against your height and age?

What are your cholesterol and triglyceride levels? Your blood pressure?

Do you drink an average of more than three ounces of alcohol daily? Have such between-meals snacks as potato chips, peanuts?

When was your last physical checkup?

The medical bill for circulatory diseases in our country is now soaring past $6.2 billion a year, an almost unbelievable 10 per cent of our national bill for all illnesses. At the top of all killers in the U.S. are diseases of the heart and blood vessels.

The loss to the nation in terms of income and productivity from deaths caused by heart attacks tops $1 billion a year, with half of it lost in the top-productive age group of 45-64. The loss to the nation in terms of income and productivity from persons becoming ill of heart conditions and unable to work tops $2.6 billion annually, and again the bulk of the loss is in the most productive age group of 45-64. Neither the National Institutes of Health nor the American Heart Association will suggest an average convalescence period; it can stretch to many months.

The economic costs involved in heart and blood vessel diseases alone — not to mention the emotional and other costs — are so vast that any steps which might possibly curb these costs come most properly into my sphere as an economics columnist. What's more, our costs are jumping instead of sinking. We are actually falling behind other nations in keeping our men alive longer.

Thus, I learned with pleasure that the National Institutes of Health is presenting a one-hour TV special, "How To Stay Alive," under the sponsorship of Bristol-Myers Co. at 10 p.m. EST May 4 on ABC network. The show will demonstrate dangerous activities which shorten our lives and will concentrate on obesity, diet, exercise, smoking, stress, blood fats, blood pressure.

The NIH also will submit its life-extending recommendations to us and our physicians.

As one illustration, you surely are aware of the danger of a high cholesterol level, but the NIH doctors will say this is not the "terrible bugaboo" it has been pictured. New discoveries in another blood fat — triglycerides — have added another warning device, with the two comprising what are called blood lipids. In some patients, "cholestrol was found to be relatively normal, while the blood triglyceride count was dangerously high."

(Question to you: Has your physician ever had your triglyceride count checked? Interpreted it with your cholestrol level?)

As another illustration, during the German occupation of Scandinavian countries, when butter, milk and cream became scarce, the incidence of coronary artery diseases went way down. But a NIH doctor will explain, the disease rate went way back up after World War II when these foods again became abundant — "pretty good proof, on a large scale, that there is something to dietary control."

As a third illustration, stress aggravates high blood pressure and circulating blood fats — high risk factors in heart diseases — but exercise lowers them. And a NIH physician will add, "Sex is also a very good exercise."

We can't do anything about any adverse family histories we may have, but we can do a great deal about every life-shortening activity or life-lengthening hint I've excerpted here from the coming show. Just by honestly answering the sample quiz in this column, you're helping yourself to stay alive.

Belief in 'Impossible,' Touchstone of Real Art

Don't Confuse Listening With Hearing, Composer Warren Benson Told Audience

BY ROBERT SHELDON
Special to The Post-Crescent

"To believe in art is to believe in the impossible," composer Warren Benson, guest-scholar at Lawrence University last week, told an audience of students, teachers and Fox Valley band directors.

Lawrence held a three-day Warren Benson Music Festival in honor of the composer who has made significant contributions to a variety of musical forms and the field of musical education. Benson, whose music was featured in concerts by the Lawrence Symphony Orchestra, Lawrence Symphony Band and at a special recital during his visit, is professor of composition at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N. Y.

An artist has to believe in the impossible in order to succeed," Benson told his audience, citing as an example the work of the painter Vermeer. "In tackling the problem of the impossible, Vermeer attempted to achieve all outdoors on a canvas only 16 inches by 12 inches," he said.

Vermeer's Success

"Vermeer's major achievement as an artist is that he was able to capture acres aned acres within the confines of his canvas. He opened up a two-dimensional reference into a three-dimensional experience. And that is impossible."

Benson said that just as a painter has to believe in paint, a poet has to believe in poetry, a dancer in the dance, and a listener has to believe in the sounds he hears.

Listening shouldn't be confused with hearing," Benson said. "To listen, we focus our total being on the world of sound. We are fully alive for an experience that we call listening — and this takes commitment.

"I believe the learning process is the beginning of commitment. If you are not committed, surely, you can't go through all the drudgery of learning how to write dry canons, draw a straight line, or pound on a rock to make a David."

A composer has to begin with such a commitment," Benson said: "The idea that music is an expressive vehicle for his feelings."

The process consists of discovering and training in techniques that allows the artist to translate his feelings into ideas, in the process of learning all there is to know, sufficent to enable him to write down in musical terms what originated as a feeling.

Benson said for a composer to finely hone his talents, he has to have teachers. He has to "be taught by creative teachers as carefully as if life depended on it." Benson said that aesthetic experience is a communication of feelings.

Shared Experience

"We may share this experience in an orchestra, a choir, in a group of people listening, in a group of people watching a great play or film," he said. As we are aware of these other people, we become aware of the fact that they are experiencing something that we are experiencing, in a very private place within ourselves.

"The artist is involved in the process of sifting from his experience those things useful to him as expression," he said. "The raw material of the composer's art is sound, any sound and the passing of time. The composer selects, makes decisions on the basis of his experience of the outside world, and to a greater degree, his inside world."

Self-Discovery

What is the inside world of an artist?; he asked.

"It is the inside world of everyman. It is the inside world of everyman's temptation. It is the decision of everyman's world in conflict with temptation, in conflict with confusion, in conflict with decision."

The composer, he said, selects according to who he is. This is limited by his knowledge of himself.

"If the creative process is nothing more, then certainly, it is nothing less then self-discovery."

Mary Griesbach Wins National Hobby Club Prize

A faithful reader of Cappy Dick's Young Hobby Club, fifth-grader Mary Griesbach has discovered her interest in the Post-Crescent column has paid off.

After innumerable tries in

the weekly contests, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy J. Griesbach, 1925 N. Outagamie St., has won the national prize of a printing press.

This means she was first an area winner, then her colorful entry was one of the five grand prize winners in the nation. The other national winners are from Michigan, Pennsylvania and Indiana.

Mary says art is her favorite hobby, along with reading. It's difficult for her to pick between the two. Now that her older brother and sister are married and another sister "is almost married," she has room to spread out at home with both her books and her art work.

Most of her Hobby Club work is done on the kitchen table, however, she says. She works with colored pencils, crayons, construction and drawing paper with both paste and scissors close at hand.

A student at St. Pius School, Mary also is an active member in Girl Scout Troop 66.

Manor Sets Open House

The public is invited to see the new $350,000 addition to Peabody Manor, 720 West Fifth St., at an open house Sunday from 1:30 to 4 p.m.

The new wing, a three-story structure with full basement, provides an additional 13,120 square feet of floor space. The first and second floors of the wing contain eight resident rooms each, and the third story includes an addition to the infirmary, and another dining solarium for residents of the infirmary. The new solarium may also be used for visiting with friends and relatives.

The new resident rooms are provided with individually controlled heat and air conditioning, interconnected rooms for couples, and other innovations found to increase the comfort and convenience of the residents.

Poabody Manor primarily serves the area of Neenah, Menasha, Appleton proper and Outagamie County.

CBS Looks at U.S. Justice, 3-Part Series

BY TV SCOUT

9-10 Channels 2-7 — CBS News takes a look at the American system of justice on Justice In America. This program, the first of a three-part series which focuses on the country's courts, is titled "Some Are More Equal Than Others," and studies whether American justice meets the fundamental concept of equality under the law.

6:30-7 Channels 2-7 — Beverly Hillbillies continues the stories set in Washington that began three weeks ago. Phil Silvers shows up as Shifty, the conman, out to get some of that Clampett money before they can donate it to the President to fight pollution. He gets $2 million immediately, as they contribute to his "Citizens Against Smog Horror" or C.A.S.H. for short.

6:30-7 Channel 5 — Julia (Diahann Carroll) goes away for a ski weekend with Steve (Fred Williamson), leaving Corey (Marc Copage) with neighbors. But her little boy reacts badly and jealousy turns out to be his motive.

6:30-7:30 Channels 11-9 — Sammy Davis Jr. is on Mod Squad, playing a famous actor who was a boyhood idol of Linc's (Clarence Williams III). The man has suddenly turned mean. What has caused this rapid change of behavior and why has someone tried to kill him? Viewers will figure it out, but Sammy does give a good performance so you'll want to stick with this. Lola Falana pays Sammy's costar and sometimes girl friend. (R)

7-7:30 Channels 2-7 — Green Acres has an old plot, but it also has some very funny dialogue and ridiculously hilarious scenes. Eb (Tom Lester) wants a new car but his "father," Oliver (Eddie Albert), refuses. This, plus the attention and gifts being lavished on little Lori (Victoria Meyerink), make him pretty upset and turn him into a runaway. (R)

8:30-9 Channels 2-7 — There are some beautiful sights in All in the Family: Archie (Caroll O'Connor) putting on his best suit to sit down and write a letter to the president and Edith (Jean Stapleton) all dressed up (including white gloves), when the family goes off to mail the letter. Archie is writing the president because his son-in-law (Rob Reiner) is also writing him, and Archie wants to counteract that "pinko propaganda." (R)

Opposition Increases but ETV Gets Commissioners' Approval

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Representatives of two of the three areas that would be served by a statewide educational television network opposed the plan as the state Building Commission voted 5-3 to recommend the $2.9 million system.

Sens. Robert Knowles, R-New Richmond, and Milo Knutson, R-La Crosse, joined Rep. Herbert Schowalter, R-Saukville, who earlier expressed opposition to the plan. The full commission's recommendation on construction of stations at La Crosse, Eau Claire and Wausau followed a subcommittee's 2-2 split over the issue.

Gov. Patrick Lucey, building commission chairman, brought two speakers into the Monday commission meeting to help sway the commission in favor of the plan he has already endorsed strongly in his executive budget. State Superintendent of Public Instruction William Kahl and Edward Wiegner, the governor's new Secretary of the Department of Revenue and former member of the Educational Communications Board, both told the commission the system is a highly economical way to increase the quality of instruction in the state's schools.

"I doubt if any proposal this commission will consider will reach out to the masses as this one," Kahl told the commission. "The state will receive rich dividends and great benefits from it in the immediate future."

Weigner told the commission that educational television is "a powerful tool at relatively low unit cost." He cited the impact of television on pre-school audiences, the great improvement in programs for both educational and cultural enrichment in the past five years, and the provision for local determination of programming as assets of the Wisconsin educational television plan.

Knowles and Knutson refrained from detailing their objections to the proposal, but Schowalter expressed his concern in terms of the rapidly increasing state debt.

Rep. Alvin Baldus, D-Menomonie, told the commission that Wisconsin has delayed development of educational television too long, particularly when it would cost an amount equal to only one-tenth of one per cent to the educational expenditures in the state or less than one book per student in all the state's elementary and secondary schools.

The recommendation goes to the Legislature's Joint Finance Committee where members have already given the Educational Communications Board operating budget a thorough and rough grilling.

$45 Million First Phase

Medical Center Start Okayed

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — With outspoken reservations, the State Building Commission gave its formal approval Monday to construction of the $45 million first phase of a new medical school at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

The project, that accounts for nearly one-third of the $143.6 million state building program the commission has recommended for the biennium, is designed as the first of four phases. But, the commission's "trepidations," in Gov. Patrick Lucey's terms, involved concern that approval of the first part of the project will ultimately commit the state to the total project slated to cost between $150 million and $200 million.

Joe E. Nusbaum, Secreary of Administration and member of the commission, proposed a policy statement setting out the commission's desire not to be unalterably committed to the whole project. The statement was approved along with the proposed first phase by a 7-1 vote with Sen. Milo Knutson, R-La Crosse, casting the single no vote.

Despite the policy statement that recognizes the probable need for further development, but reserves the right to respond to "changing concepts of medical education and needs and opportunities for such education at other locations," the commission indicated a realization the future stages probably would be encouraged.

"I have no illusions about the fact it does move us toward a total commitment," Gov. Lucey said. "The logic for subsequent phases is even more compelling than for phase one," he added. "In voting, we should vote with our eyes wide open."

The need for the additional phases, Lucey said, would undoubtedly be argued on the basis that the medical center should be centralized. The first phase will provide for a moving of a portion of the present medical school facilities to the far west end of the UW campus, adjacent to the Veterans Administration hospital.

The policy statement was drafted, Nusbaum said, after he reveiwed a letter written by Dean Peter L. Eichman of the medical school that indicated failure to continue development beyond the first stage would be neither educationally, nor medically sound. At the commission meeting, however, Eichman called the statement a "sound and reasonable statement" he added that the medical school is interested in keeping "all the options open."

Women as Part-Time Doctors Called 'Bigotry' by Psychiatrist

NEW YORK — Dr. Harold I. Kaplan, professor of psychiatry at New York Medical College, said in a magazine article released today that the prejudice which exists against women in medicine is without foundation.

Give women an equal chance in the medical profession and they will "match men on every professional level," Dr. Kaplan states in the current issue of Redbook magazine.

"In general, women have been treated in medical schools like second-rate citizens," he charged. "Yes, some women drop out of medicine, but many men drop out too .... There is a significant number of physicians in industry and business, and no one seems excited about that. I think the difference in male and female performance among medical students and doctors is illusory."

Dr. Kaplan revealed in the Redbook article, written by award-winning journalist Fern Marja Eckman, that he has been under heavy fire from male colleagues since publication of his seven-year study on the recruitment and utilization of women docotrs.

"Men don't appreciate men who stand up for women's rights," he said. "They can't understand why a prominent male educator should get involved."

Citing the success of reforms already instituted at New York Medical College to aid female students who are also wives and mothers, Dr. Kaplan called for similar changes in other schools.

"Provide them (women students) with day-care centers, give them tax deductions for nurseries and household help, modify programs to integrate them more practically into the exigencies of family life," he urged. "For American medical educators to resist such changes and then accuse medical women of being part-time doctors is nothing but male chauvinism. I will put it even more plainly. It's bigotry".

The Redbook article emphasized that although the United States is faced with a serious shortage of doctors, it ranks a dismal 26th among 29 countries in the percentage of its doctors who are women, with only South Vietnam, Madagascar and Spain rated below.

Feminine Styles To Revive Reports Baldwin

By ODETTE MENGIN
Associated Press Writer

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — "Women are anxious to get back into feminine clothes," said John Baldwin of St. Petersburg, Fla., as the three-day showing of autumn and winter Italian ready to wear ended Thursday.

Added Norman Silberstein of Alexander's in New York City: "It'll be refreshing to see the leg rather than the boot."

More than 400 foreign buyers from five continents attended the showing, and most said they were glad to see a return to skirts and dresses just covering the knee.

But some praised the masculine suits shown by Caumont, Krizia and Kinki.

A Japanese buyer, S. Sakai of Kobe, said the style would be quite popular in Japan.

Beverly Rice of L. S. Ayres and Co. in Indianapolis, thought the Kinki pants suits were "terrific." She said the Italian collections gave pants "a whole new future. They have a crisp look but fabrics are soft."

Knitwear and leathers for which the Italians are famous the world over, also sold well. Mrs. Rice loved the "chubby look" of Milena Mosele's clothes with fringed wool all over. "It's very young and snappy," she said.

American buyers were lining up at the Missoni stand where amusing plaid skirts and stripy vests were displayed. Baldwin thought this collection was "the newest and most exciting in knitwear."

The leather houses showed far more shorts than other designers, but "by fall, hot pants will have cooled off considerably," said Silberstein.

Most buyers seemed to prefer what they called "the normal look," classic cut with a length on or just below the knee.

Eccentric styles like Ken-Scott's Japanese look did not appear to have made a hit. "It's not wearable," said a German buyer. "It doesn't have a chance in the States," said Baldwin.

Reigning Over Friday's Kimberly High School Junior Prom were Miss Pat Wolter and Nick Gaffney. The formal was held at the Combined Locks Pavillion. Below, Dave Krabbe and Miss Linda Missling take a reprieve from the dance floor to pose with the knight.

Notre Dame Alumnus to Meet Tonight

The Notre Dame Club of Green Bay-Fox Valley will hold its annual Universal Notre Dame Night this evening at Butte des Morts Golf Club. Cocktails will start at 6:30 p.m. and a buffet dinner will be served at 7:30 p.m.

Timothy J. Hughes, managing editor of the Notre Dame Alumnus magazine, will be the speaker.

This is the 48th anniversary of Universal Notre Dame nights, held throughout the nation and around the world. The event was originated in 1924 as a means of calling attention to Notre Dame's academic progress.

Wednesday Slated As Parents' Night

Parents' night for members of Troop 166 of Huntley School is being scheduled for 7 p.m. Wednesday at the Girl Scout Center, 933 E. College Ave.

The program will include film strips on camping, a fashion show with clothes being made and modeled by the scouts who made them for their sewing badge. Also included in the evening's event will be a dance review by girls who earned the dance badge. Displays of items that brought scouts their needlecraft, my home, housekeeper, collector, pen pal, observer, sewer and toymaker badges will be on view.

Troop leader is Mrs. Carl Stracka with Mrs. Dennis Daniels, co-leader. Refreshments will be served and the girls will be presented their badges during a Badge Ceremony.

First Coffee Pot

The first silver coffee pot appeared in England in 1681. Coffee had earlier been introduced but was considered a harmful drug, capable of turning men into "apes and pygmies." After coffee became accepted, it was served from a pot similar to a tea pot and only ten inches high. At first, the handle was opposite the spout, then it was moved at right angles to the spout, the spout became curved, the pot octagonal and finally, a tapering cylindrical shape.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

by IRA G. CORN JR., TEAM CAPTAIN
World Champions

Mike Connelly, former offensive lineman of the Dallas Cowboys and Pittsburgh Steelers, has much experience in avoiding plays at the line of scrimmage. Occasionally he also has an opportunity to apply avoidance tactics at the bridge table.

Observe his play in today's game contract as he took every precaution against a 15-yard penalty. Connelly held today's South hand.

| 2 NT | Pass | 3 ♥ | Pass |
| 4 ♥ | Pass | Pass | Pass |

Opening lead: Six of hearts.

The bidding was direct and simple, with South's opening bid and two no-trump rebid showing a five-card heart suit, 16 to 18 high-card points, and stoppers in the unbid suits.

After North's heart support, Mike understandably decided to play in four hearts. As the cards lay, three no-trump would have proven an easier contract.

Against West's lead of a trump, South must give the hand careful thought. All would be well if either the diamond king or the club ace were favorably located.

However, what if they were not? Then East must be kept off lead to prevent an attack on the club king. Three club tricks and a diamond would result in four defensive tricks and a defeated contract.

How did Connelly execute his blocks?

He won the trump lead in dummy and led the spade five to his 10 and to West's queen. Although the finesse lost, it lost to the non-danger hand — west.

Unable to gainfully attack clubs, West played another trump. Connelly won in dummy and played the ace and jack of spades, discarding his diamond 10.

Next came the diamond ace and the diamond jack. East ducked and Connelly discarded a club. Note that if the diamond king were with West, once again he could not attack clubs.

Connelly repeated the ruffing finesse in the diamond suit. (If East ducked, another club would be discarded.) East covered, Connelly ruffed and returned to dummy with another trump to discard a club on the established diamond.

Connelly lost only one spade and two club tricks to score his well-earned game.

Connelly played the hand well. As at the line of scrimmage, he knew his blocking assignment and took care to assure that East did not "get through" to break up the play.

Your Problems

Ann Recommends Support of Cancer Bill

Dear Readers: If you are looking for a laugh today, you'd better skip Ann Landers. If you want to be part of an effort that might save millions of lives — maybe your own — please stay with me.

Who among us has not lost a loved one to cancer?

Landers

Is there a single person in my reading audience so incredibly lucky that his life has not been changed in some way by this dread disease? More Americans died of cancer in 1969 than were killed in the four years of World War II. Of the 200 million Americans alive today, 50 million will develop cancer. Approximately 34 million will die of it. Cancer claims the lives of more children under 15 years of age than any other illness.

How many of us have asked the question, "If this great country of ours can put a man on the moon why can't we find a cure for cancer?" One reason is that we have never launched a national campaign, a united effort, against this killer disease. Another reason is money. The funds designated for medical research in America are grossly inadequate. Government grants for medical research have virtually dried up. The lion's share of the tax dollar is going to defense.

The following statistics shook me. They tell an interesting (and shameful) story about the priorities in this country. In 1969, for every man, woman and child in the United States our government spent:

$125 on the war in Vietnam
$19 on the space program
$19 on foreign aid
89 cents on cancer research

Soon a bill will come before the United States Senate which calls for the establishment of a National Cancer Authority. This bill, S-34 will be sponsored by Senators Edward Kennedy and Jacob Javits. The proposed National Cancer Authority would be an agency similar to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) which put men on the moon. This Conquest of Cancer bill demands that the highest priority be given to devise better methods of prevention, diagnosis and cure of cancer at the earliest possible date.

Today you have the opportunity to be a part of the mightiest offensive against a single disease in the history of our country. If enough citizens let their senators know they want Bill S-34 passed, it will pass.

I urge each and every person who reads this column to write to his two senators at once — or better yet, send telegrams. If you don't know the names of your two senators, call your newspaper. Address your letter or telegram to: Senator — , Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C., 20510.

Your message need consist of only three words. "Vote for S-34." And sign your name, please.

No one can do everything, but each of us can do something. It is entirely possible that this one small act could reshape the lives of millions. Get moving. My telegrams to Senators Charles Percy and Adlai Stevenson went out last night. ....

Thanks — and God bless.

Byrnes Calls for Cheese Quota

Congressman Says Imports Hurting U.S. Dairy Industry

Rep. John W. Byrnes today urged the U. S. Tariff Commission to recommend to the President that all quota-type cheeses be made subject to import quotas.

Byrnes said that exemption of certain cheeses having a purchase price of 47 cents a pound or more from quota restrictions "was a vast mistake" and "the tremendous increase in imports of cheese, priced at over 47 cents a pound had effectively nullified the quotas established in 1968.

"We cannot give foreign nations an ever increasing share of a declining dairy market without disastrous effects upon the American dairy industry," Byrnes said in a statement filed with the Commission as it began public hearings in Washington today on certain cheese imports.

Byrnes told the Commission "this government must recognize, if it is to assure its citizens of an adequate supply of milk through a national price support program, that it cannot allow increased imports of dairy products to disrupt markets and make the price support program costly and unworkable."

President Nixon has ordered the Tariff Commission to investigate whether certain Swiss or Emmenthaler cheese, Gruyere-process cheese and cheese classified as "other" are being imported in such quantities as to interfere with the price support program or domestic milk production.

Byrnes suggested that in addition to the elimination of the "price-break" system, "the Commission should recommend that there be no increase in the quotas for these cheese beyond those established in 1968.

"Foreign nations have expoited the price-break provision to avoid the quotas on these cheeses. They should not now be rewarded by increases in quotas based on this avoidance," he said.

Fine Youths $200 For Misconduct

Outagamie County Judge Nick F. Schaefer Monday levied stiff fines on two teen-agers who earlier pleaded guilty on amended charges of disorderly conduct.

Fines of $200 and costs were imposed on Randy Calder, 18, 2307 N. Mason St., and Ronald Deeg, 18, 421 S. Weimar St., in County Court Branch 2. The pair spent the weekend in jail after Schaefer, on Friday, directed their confinement. They originally had been charged with entering a locked vehicle.

Calder, Deeg and a 17-year-old Appleton youth were apprehended April 9 while carrying what were later found to be a stolen tape player and tapes in the 1500 block of E. Northland Avenue. They dropped the objects when they saw a policeman.

The items had been stolen from the car of Michael McGlin, 1151 Valley Road, Menasha, while it was parked at 1500 E. Longview Drive. A vent window had been smashed to enter the car.

The youngest boy was on juvenile parole. It was revoked last week and he was sent to the Lincoln School for Boys. A defense attorney told the court Friday that the juvenile was the one who actually broke into the car.

90 Pounds Lost by TOPS Queen

NEENAH-MENASHA — Mrs. Wilma Kane, Cato, was crowned queen at the third annual Area Rally Day of TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly) Saturday at Sabre Lanes, Menasha. The queen's crown goes to the woman who has proved over a period of time that she can take off weight and keep it off.

Mrs. Kane, a member of KOPS (Keep Off Pounds Sensibly), lost a total of 90½ pounds to gain the title. Runnerup, Mrs. Sally Tiedt, Menasha, lost 70 pounds to earn her honor.

"Best Loser" of the year was Mrs. Lucille Hackmann, Manitowoc, who recorded a loss of 63½ pounds during the past 12 months.

The traveling trophy, for the club with most pounds per member weight loss, was awarded to Trimer Oaks Club, Oakfield, a new member of the area association.

Thirty-one clubs took part in the rally which more than 350 persons attended. Neenah-Menasha TOPS clubs, including New-U, Tapeline, Top-Notch and Twin City TOPS were hosts for the rally.

Double Standard Tumbles

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a changing eye toward motherhood, the Army is going to allow its female officers and enlisted women to do what many women do—have children and raise a family.

New regulations, effective in two weeks, will permit WACs and female Army nurses who are married and "who are pregnant, have had terminated pregnancies or who become parents" to stay in the Army. In the past, this meant automatic discharge.

The change is the latest move by the armed services to ease traditional double standards for the sexes.

The Air Force adopted a similar policy in March. The Navy is expected to follow soon. Earlier this year, the Army approved recruiting married women.

An Army spokesman said the new policy won't mean "a wholesale opening of the doors" to mothers in uniform. "The mere fact that a woman is married and pregnant and wants to stay on are not the only grounds. She must also meet the other requirements."

According to the regulations, a WAC officer must first have the recommendation of her commanding officer, a statement that the child will not interfere with her work or "result in neglect of the child," and "the proper medical certification and history."

Requests from enlisted women also must include an explanation of "the circumstances involved" in a pregnancy.

If approved, the Army will grant the mother-to-be a leave of absence from the seventh month of pregnancy to the sixth week after birth of the child.

The same procedures apply to married women who want to adopt children or whose pregnancy is aborted, either medically or by miscarriage.

Unmarried women who become pregnant will be discharged as in the past. However, in special cases they will be eligible to remain in the Army should they adopt children or if their pregnancy is terminated. "Each individual case will be handled on its merits," the spokesman said.

One WAC officer thinks few women will take advantage of the new regulations.

"I would think most women who want to have children would prefer to leave the Army," she said. "It would be a natural, maternal instinct to be with the child."

She'd Risk Her Neck for Baby Book

BY ERMA BOMBECK

When a radio station caught fire recently, a disk jockey ran into the burning building and emerged happily with the one thing he considered worth risking his neck for . . . a recording of Frank Sinatra singing, "Night And Day."

When I asked myself what I would save if our home was in flames, the answer was quick and unfaltering: the baby book of the children. I don't get mellow too often, but when I do I am positively sickening about it. I leaf through that baby book and can almost see the bald head and the wrinkled feet; smell the milk breath and talcumed bottom; feel the smooth skin and wet fists. That book is Daddy with hair, a house the size of a phone booth; me in a size 10. It can never be replaced.

"If our house was on fire," I asked my family, "What would you save?"

"Who set it on fire?" asked the youngest.

"It doesn't matter who set the fire," I said, "I'm only asking what you would save."

"That's easy," he said, "My Easter candy in the freezer."

"That's stupid," I said, "That can be replaced."

"Yeah, but not until next Easter," he said.

"I'd save your hair dryer," said my daughter.

"But what about all the friendship, pictures of your classmates you gathered?"

"I see them at school," she yawned.

"I think I would save my bowling ball," pondered my husband.

"You're kidding," I gasped. "That thing has been stored in the attic so long, it's flat on the bottom. You never bowl anymore."

"I know, but if a new house was being built and I didn't have all this yard work and inside repairs, I might have time to bowl again."

My other son hesitated. "I guess, first I'd grab Harry (our dog), then my box of snacks I keep under the bed, and then my can of new tennis balls. If I still had some time, I'd check on you and Dad."

"What would you save, Mom?" they asked.

I thought of the book with the pink faces that launched a thousand Christmas cards. The record of immunizations. The loving arms thrown around Granddad's knees. The cardboard flowers stapled to a sucker, and said, "My list of baby sitters."

"That figures," they grimaced.

I didn't want to blow my image. Besides, I keep the list of baby sitters in the back of the baby book.

Rodeo Important to Pretty Young Miss

DENVER (AP) — Jeana Day's mother sometimes worries that her pretty 16-year-old daughter is missing out on the fun of being a teen-ager, but Jeana says she'd rather barrel race any day.

And so far the slim, 105-pounder from Woodward, Okla., has managed to do quite well in both her high school studies and barrel racing, a demanding women's rodeo event in which riders charge their mounts through a twisting three-barrel course against the clock.

She's an A average student and last year she pulled down $9,500 in rodeo prize money along the way to winning the reserve world championship at the National Finals rodeo in Oklahoma City.

"I think I am a very lucky person," the blue-eyed blonde said.

"I am accomplishing something and still enjoying myself.

"Sometimes my mother worries that I might be missing out on parties and things like that," Jeana said, "but I don't.

"Most of my close friends are rodeo people and we have a great time together," she said.

Jeana, whose mother was once a barrel racer, started in the sport about five years ago.

"I would ride my aunt's old barrel horse around the ranch and in some junior rodeos," she said. "It was fun and challenging and I just decided to take it up."

Jeana, who travels the circuit with her parents in a combination house-horse trailer, says she spends 80 to 90 per cent of the year on the road.

A junior in high school, she has little trouble keeping up her A average even though she is on the road so much of the time.

"The teachers go along with it as much as they can," she said. "They know how important the rodeo is to me and they are all pulling for me," she said.

"They give me assignments before I go and I work on them on the road," she said. "And as long as I keep up my average I will graduate along with the rest of my class."

But Jeana feels that in some ways she will be graduating ahead of her class.

"I am experiencing something many people my age never do," she said. "I am having an exciting life and at the same time a meaningful one."

Good Neighbors Meet at Fair

Whiffs of homemade bread, of Spanish hamburgers and of German potato salad mingled with all the other good food that was being offered for sale during the 23rd semi-annual Good Neighbor Fair Saturday at Valley Fair.

Sixty-four organizations from the Fox River Valley area participated in the event which helps each raise money to continue charitable work.

This fair is one of those events that somehow reminds one of days long since past when a country fair was one of the biggest social affairs of the summer season. Today, people enjoy them because they suggest the easier pace of those bygone days.

Chairman of this event begun 12 years ago were Joseph Trudell and Glenn C. Kvaley.

Private Firms Dislike Competing With City Rescue Squad

BY BILL KNUTSON
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Appleton's two private ambulance operators fear they will be driven out of business by the fire department.

"Contrary to what they (fire department officials) say, they are in the ambulance business and they are attempting, rather openly, to put us out," said James Welch, owner of Gold Cross Ambulance Service.

"Ultimately, they will succeed," Welch theorized. "No private enterprise can compete with a city."

If the private ambulances should fold, he explained, taxpayers would get tagged with an added half million dollars a year — the cost of more men and equipment that would be needed for an expanded rescue squad operation. The city would need at least five ambulances, Welch said.

Lawrence Seidl, owner of Larry's Ambulance Service, figures he is losing 18 to 20 calls a month to the fire department. At about $25 per in-city call (the same as is charged by the fire department), that would mean the rescue squad is costing Seidl between $450 and $500 a month in business.

"There just isn't enough business here for two private operators and the rescue squad," Seidl felt.

Neither Seidl nor Welch wants the fire department to get out of the rescue business. But they don't want the city running an ambulance. They don't want the rescue squad to be a ride to the hospital.

The fire department has a bus-like van that is equipped for heavy rescue work such as freeing persons trapped in auto wrecks, fire or cave-ins and for major disasters. The bus is known as Squad 2. Seidl and Welch want to see Squad 2 retained because they admit that they cannot match some of the emergency services it is capable of providing.

But they say they can more than match the services provided through the fire department's Squad 1, the light emergency rescue vehicle that the private operators say is really nothing more than an inexpensive ambulance. Fire Chief Roland Kuehnl is attempting to replace Squad 1, a 1968 International Travel-All, with a new, bigger and more expensive Chevrolet van.

"The only reason he wants the new unit is to compete with us," Welch charged. "They have made it quite clear they are going to keep gnawing away."

Welch sees the rescue squad as a $100,000 duplication effort by the city over services provided by the private firms. He said that that is approximately the amount needed each year to operate the rescue squad. Kuehnl said there never was any need to hire more firemen for the rescue squad and he explained that if the squad were dropped, the manpower would be absorbed into the fire fighting service.

Ambulances are not the only sources of income for Seidl and Welch. The also do funeral coach work for Fox Valley funeral homes.

Welch said his coach rental business accounts for about half of his income. Seidl, who has contracts with only three funeral homes, estimated his coach trade comprises only a third of his income.

Seidl and Welch serve a big portion of the Fox Cities area with their ambulances, while the rescue squad is limited to in-city runs.

Under an arrangement in effect for many years, the Appleton Police Department and the Outagamie County Sheriff's Department call Gold Cross and Larry's on a monthly rotation basis for accidents and other emergencies that necessitate patient conveyance. The ambulance bills are sent to the persons transported.

More lucrative than the short emergency runs for the ambulance operators are the trips with patients to distant medical facilities, such as Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., and to patients' homes or other destinations outside Appleton.

But Welch said it would not pay a private operator to maintain an ambulance service just for out-of-city runs.

Welch has two ambulances, a 1968 Chevrolet van capable of carrying four patients (the vehicle is similar to the one the fire department wants to buy) and a 1970 Cadillac. Both Gold Cross ambulances are kept in a

VTE-12 to Let Option On County Land Expire

BY MAIJA PENIKIS
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

A decision to let an option for purchase of 103 acres of county land near the Fox Valley Technical Institute expire in May was made Monday by the Vocational Technical and Adult Education District 12 board.

The resolution came after a lengthy and heated meeting, with board members straddling the fence, trying to determine the future needs of the district.

Finally, in a compromise move, the board asked their attorney to meet with the Outagamie County Board's corporation council and discuss a possible "first refusal" agreement on a 40-acre parcel adjacent to FVTI land.

This would mean that when the county board decides to sell that parcel, VTE-12 would have first rights on it.

The district's option on the 103 acres located west of U.S. 41 at County Trunk OO expires May 14. A five year extension of the option had been requested by the district board but the request met with objections from county supervisors — at least for the current price of $2,000 an acre.

At a recent county board executive committee meeting where FVTI Director William Sirek asked for the extension, it was decided that a three year option, incorporating a 4 per cent annual interest figure of the total price could be a compromise.

This would mean that the VTE-12 board would pay $8,000 a year interest until they decide whether to buy the land. No one was certain, however, if the interest would be added to the total cost if the VTE board decided to buy it.

The fact that the 103-acre parcel on which the VTE-12 held the option was not contiguous to FVTI was a prime reason for the decision to let the option lapse.

"Since the land isn't next to ours and is separated by a highway (U.S. 41), it isn't that valuable to us," commented Donald Steinfort, Oshkosh, who was the most vehement in opposing the purchase.

"When we need land, we can just go down the road and buy some more, probably for less. What's the difference where it is, if it isn't right next to our

Sewerage Problem

'Green Stuff That Just Smells'

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Justice moves slowly — even on pollution abatement in this pollution-conscious age.

And in the meantime, several residents along Michigan Avenue on Appleton's north city limits must suffer with the unsightliness of a large pool of "all green stuff which just sits there and smells, especially when the wind is right."

This is Mrs. Diehl F. Pickett's description of the large mixture of surface drainage and seeping cesspool wastes which stand in an open field behind her home at 406 W. Michigan.

Her neighbors are just as unhappy with the mess. Over the years, they have contacted state and city health officials, Outagamie County officials and Town of Grand Chute officials, asking that something be done. The cesspool drainage is coming from the town.

"I think they've been working on it but they never seem to get anything accomplished," says Mrs. Pickett.

"We've been trying to find out who to contact because everytime we contact someone, they refer us to someone else," says Mrs. John D. Wagar, 418 W. Michigan Ave.

There have been difficulties. The city has refused to annex the properties where the drainage is coning from — mainly from the North Star Mobile Home Park, 2722 N. Richmond St. — and the town hasn't been able to get a legal foothold against the polluters.

Ira Livingston, town chairman, said the town hired attorneys to initiate legal action but "they didn't get very far."

The problem, Livingston said, is that the owner of the park died in 1968 and the estate is still unsettled. The owner was the late Ralph Rohm, and the estate now is being handled for his widow and his children.

Mrs. Peter Van Krey, Appleton, one of the children, said the park is for sale. She lamented that there aren't large enough septic tanks that could be installed in the park and criticized the town for failing to resolve the problem be moving faster on installation of sewer service.

Livingston said that town officials would confer with engineers Thursday and said he hoped that sewer could be installed in the area next year.

The county director of public services, Frank Charlesworth, also has attempted to solve the problem. He issued abatement orders against the park, Wisconsin Muffler Service and the Gordon Rohm bus service — all found to be contributing to the area's surface sewage problem — but got responses from nobody.

He said today that he would request the county judge to set a hearing on the pollution in an effort to stop the polluting. He had no idea when the hearing might be and noted that any temporary relief for the Michigan Avenue residents is unlikely.

The residents have complained for years. City and state health officials have been at the scene and town workers have graded the area to try to stop the drainage. But nothing has worked.

When spring waters flood the area, they hamper the septic tank operations, and the raw sewerage mingles with the standing water.

"I try to keep my little ones away from there because I'm afraid they might pick up something," says Mrs. Wagar.

She says it's the worst this spring that it's been in her family's five years there. She noted that one of her children came in after wading in the muck, and when his boots dried, they were covered with a green layer.

No Action on Bus Funds, Police Site Or Assessments

"Hold it" was the byword Monday night as the City Council's finance committee put off action on bus subsidy payments, investigating the vocational school's possibilities as a police station, and conducting a hearing on property assessment procedures.

The council's committees reorganize tonight, and the new finance committee will find the postponed items in its files the first time it meets.

Of the present five members, only one was defeated in the recent elections, and most of the remaining four are expected to remain on the committee. Nevertheless, reorganization was one reason committeemen gave for delaying action on the items.

One committeeman, Ald. Glenn Thompson (13th), reluctantly went along with delaying action on his proposal to hold a special hearing on assessment procedures.

Postponement Asked

Thompson at first said he saw no reason the committee couldn't set a date for the hearing. But Finance Director David Champion said Thompson's co-sponsor of the resolution, Ald. Judith Winzenz (12th), and Assessor George Schwarzbauer had both asked postponements until the next meeting when they plan to be present.

Ald. Alvin Tews (5th), chairman, asked Thompson who would conduct the proposed hearing. Thompson replied Schwarzbauer would. "What do you want to do, crucify the poor guy?" demanded Ald. Robert Roemer (8th). He said it would be "a necktie party."

Thompson said the purpose would simply be to answer questions people have about the assessment system. He reported receiving a number of telephone calls. Tews and Roemer suggested the annual meeting of the board of review is the proper place for the question. "There's some political angle on it," Roemer accused.

Tews suggested a connection between Thompson's proposal and the campaign of Harold Oswald, 622 E. Grant St., against current assessment practices. Without naming him, Tews said Oswald has made a general reassessment part of an effort to have the assessed valuation on his own home reduced.

Never Contacted

Thompson replied that Oswald never has contacted him, and later expressed favor for enlarging the assessor's staff, rather than hiring a private firm to reassess the city. But he agreed to hold the hearing proposal.

The committee withheld acting on a proposal by another member, Roemer, to hire an architect to study costs and feasibility of installing the police department in the Appleton Vocational School. The finance director advised the delay.

Champion told the committee there aren't any funds to pay an architect. Since the vocational building won't be vacated until June, 1972, Champion suggested the funds could be included in the 1972 city budget and discussed by the entire City Council either at budget time or when a capital improvement plan is adopted.

The committee agreed to hold the matter, but Roemer said he will bring it up for discussion today at the regular board of public works session, after someone suggested that is the proper place to discuss it anyway.

Payment of more than $13,000 in subsidy funds to Fox River Bus Lines was delayed after Champion said he hadn't had time yet to meet with the city's auditor and go over the bus line's figures. Voters recently approved a permanent subsidy by 10,000 to 2,700 votes inan advisory referendum, but council reorganization again has meant a short delay.

Board Rule Changes OK'd

Major rule changes, seen as having had little chance of passing before the start of today's Outagamie County Board reorganization session, were approved without amendment this morning after a personal plea from board chairman Russell DeLaHunt and support from several influential board members.

The vote was 40 to 5.

Approval of the new rule was followed by appointment of revamped Board of Social Services and an upset in the voting for membership on the highway committee.

The two major features of the new rules are:

— Abolishment of the present 11-man executive committee composed of representatives of other standing committees with replacement by a seven-member standing policy and finance committee.

— Creation of the position of legislative secretary for the county board.

"Name of the Game"

DeLaHunt said he believed the new rules were compatible with change and "That's the name of the game." He said the responsibility for the functioning of county government rests on the shoulders of the committee chairmen, referring to the rules which now recognize the board chairman as having final say on committee appointments.

"If you leave out the fundamental tools of leadership and authority, what do you have?" he asked the board.

"I think these are good rules. There is nothing in them that will disturb you. I think I can fill the leadership role if the individual supervisors are willing to sacrifice," he told the board.

The board chairman was backed by Supvs. John Schreiter and G. Allen Bubolz, both of Appleton.

Schreiter said, "I believe in a strong legislative body. We can only be strong if we rally around a leader."

Sufficient Scrutiny

Bubolz, who had expressed reservations about the new rules last month, said he had felt there was not a proper delineation of power of the chairman. But, he added, "the power carries with it the responsibility to perform well." He said he now felt there would be sufficient scrutiny by the board during the year to ensure proper performance.

The main opposition came from Supv. Joseph DeBruin, Town of Buchanan, who objected to elimination of the Executive Committee.

"I hate to see the executive committee abolished," DeBruin told fellow supervisors. "I want to keep representation from each standing committee. The only alternative is a coordinating committee."

On the Board of Social Services, only Supvs. L. A. Woodard, Appleton, and Matt Verfuth, Kaukauna, were retained by County Executive-elect Alvin Woehler.

Schaefer Criticized By Appeals Court

Although citing judicial immunity in upholding the dismissal of a $50,000 civil suit brought against Outagamie County Judge Nick F. Schaefer, the United States Court of Appeals has criticized him for his actions two years ago in a case involving an Appleton man charged with marijuana and narcotics violations.

Charles E. Jacobson, 22, 1208 N. Superior St., who now is in the Wisconsin State Reformatory, brought the suit against Schaefer.

Jacobson alleged that his civil rights were violated when Schaefer ordered that money to pay his court-appointed attorney be taken from bail money that had been posted for him, resulting in his loss of freedom.

Schaefer had set Jacobson's bail at $3,000 after the former rural Kaukauna man appeared in court on the felony charges. Jacobson's father, Alex, route 1, Kaukauna, furnished the bail.

Jacobson later was found indigent and an attorney was appointed for him at county expense. In July, 1969, Jacobson's fiance, now his wife, offered him funds to employ his own counsel.

Schaefer required Jacobson to answer why, although he was unable to pay his court-appointed attorney, he was free on bail and was able to hire his own lawyer. Schaefer also ordered Jacobson to attempt to pay the first lawyer's fee.

Jacobson's father informed Schaefer that he was unwilling to have some of the $3,000 bail money he had posted go toward paying the attorney because he had borrowed the money on his life insurance, he was totally disabled, his only source of income was his Social Security and he had two minor children at home.

When Jacobson did not pay the $675 bill, Schaefer ordered that the amount be taken from the bail money in the clerk of court's office. Schaefer then found Jacobson in default of bond and ordered him remanded to jail. Schaefer also ordered that no further bail be accepted without his specific approval.

Woman Dead After Calumet Traffic Crash

A 72-year-old Kaukauna woman was dead on arrival at St. Elizabeth Hospital shortly after 11 a.m. today after a traffic accident involving her car and a semi-trailer truck, in northern Calumet County.

The victim was Harriet L. Schmidt, 305 W. Ninth St., according to Calumet County Coroner Leroy Hughes.

County police said the Schmidt woman was eastbound on U.S. 10 and making a left turn onto State 55 when the truck, driven by Dennis Bushendorf, 29, Elk Mound, traveling west on 10, collided with her car.

Authorities said her car was struck broadside. She was alone.

It was the fourth traffic fatality of the year in Calumet County.

Mary Fullarton, 12, Was Struck by Car Last Tuesday

A 12-year-old Appleton girl died early today of injuries she received a week ago when struck by an automobile in the Town of Grand Chute.

She is Mary Fullarton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. Fullarton, 1323 W. Second St. She sustained severe head injuries and fractured left arm and pelvis in the accident that occurred on Outagamie County Trunk V, 1½ miles west of Appleton, last Tuesday afternoon.

Her death raises the 1971 traffic fatality toll in Outagamie County to five, compared with eight on this date a year ago. Coroner Bernard H. Kemps ruled the girl's death a result of the accident injuries.

The driver of the car, Victoria J. Anderson, 21, of 1220 County Trunk S, Neenah, told county police she was westbound on V when the Fullarton girl jumped into the path of her car while walking with a group of other girls.

The girl had been in the intensive care unit of St. Elizabeth Hospital where she died about 4 a.m. today.

She was a seventh grade student at St. Joseph School. Funeral arrangements will be handled through the Ellenbecker-Andersen Funeral Home.

Light Tie-in Could Improve City Traffic

A traffic survey by the American Automobile Association shows Appleton could improve the flow of traffic along major streets by changing the timing and tightening coordination between 36 traffic lights.

The AAA recommended prompt adoption of the plan, presented Monday to the City Council's public safety committee. Lacking enough members to form a quorum, the committee postponed action.

William Marvin, engineer in charge of traffic engineering for the Wisconsin AAA, presented the results of a year's study without charge to the city. Besides the recommendations for improving the city's traffic signal system, it contains high praise for the city engineering department and Traffic Engineer Walter Johnson.

Johnson provided "the most complete information we have encountered among the various cities within which we have worked on similar studies, the report states.

The information, including location, peak traffic, pavement widths, existing signal timing and other factors for signalized intersections, "can be the foundation for all future traffic engineering work in the city," said the report.

The survey found 29 of the 37 signalized intersections studied are currently interconnected with the timing at one intersection coordinated with the next. Of the remaining eight, the report found the Lawe-Atlantic Street intersection is far enough from the others studied that it probably can remain independent of the system.

But the report suggests expanding the existing system to interconnect with the presently independent signals at College Avenue-Lawe Street, Atlantic-Oneida Street, Badger Avenue-Packard - Mason Street, Badger-College - Story Street, Badger - Memorial Drive and Appleton-Franklin streets.

70-Second Cycle

In addiiton, the study recommended field tests to determine whether the Memorial Drive-Prospect Avenue lights could be coordinated with the rest. The key to the system is placing all lights on a 70-second cycle, and the tests would be needed to determine whether that cycle would be adequate to handle the Memorial-Prospect traffic, listed as heaviest of all signalized intersections in the city.

Besides coordinating all signals in the system, the report recommends new time-splits for dividing intersection use between through- and cross-traffic.

Marvin told Police Chief Earl Wolff the survey team was surprised that allowing left turns along College Avenue has produced as few problems as it has. He told Wolff he suspects there are many motorists still unaware that left turns are legal, after having long been banned. "It may gradually build up to a problem for you," he told Wolff.

Marvin said the costliest portion of the task of carrying out the AAA recommendations will be in making the connections between the present network of signal lights and those to be added. But he said it is possible federal TOPICS street improvement aid funds may be available for the project.

garage-office at 1335 S. Oneida St.

Seidl has five ambulances, four of them kept at his home at 116 S. Weimer St., and one in Kimberly. Two of his ambulances are 1963 Cadillacs, two are 1966 Cadillacs and one is a 1960 Pontiac.

Seidl said he is holding off buying new equipment until the rescue squad vehicle issue is resolved.

Gold Cross is the only one of the three emergency services having direct, two-way radio contact with the police and sheriff's departments. Seidl has citizen band radios in his ambulances and the rescue squad had direct radio contact only with the fire department.

A dozen men work as attendants and drivers for God Cross. Eleven of them are part-time employes, paid on a per-call basis. Seidl said he has 20 employes, two of them working full time. Several attendants have been with the firms since they were started.

The ambulance garages are not manned around the clock, although Seidl and Welch said they usually have personnel near the ambulances during the day. Key ambulance attendants live within a few blocks of both garages and they receive incoming ambulance calls at their homes. A driver and an attendant are in the ambulance on emergency calls.

Seidl and Welch said they could not afford to staff their ambulances 24 hours a day. Welch said it would cost him at least $100,000 a year, for equipment and personnel, and he added, "this city won't generate $100,000 worth of ambulance business a year."

Fire department officials maintain that because firemen are on duty all the time, they can have the rescue squad on the road 30 seconds to a minute after a call is received.

They maintain that promptness of response could be critical in some emergency situations, particularly those involving heart attacks, poison, severe bleeding and breath stoppage.

Seidl and Welch said their response time is only a minute or two more than the rescue squad's. Welch said his ambulances could get to a south side destination before the rescue squad, which is housed at No. 1 fire station at 700 N. Drew St.

But Seidl and Welch said fire department officials over-emphasize the importance of response time. The first three minutes after the person stops breathing is the critical time, and it's virtually impossible for even the rescue squad to be there that quick, Welch said, because calls for assistance seldom are made immediately after a victim collapses.

"When you're talking about response time, you can't say it isn't important," he explained. "It is. But this talk about seconds making the difference is not true."

Both ambulance operators said that although it might be difficult for the patient or someone with him to understand, there actually are very few true emergency cases where response time is critical.

Seidl and Welch insist their attendants receive more and better training than firemen, although it is nearly impossible to evaluate and compare the thoroughness and quality of training received by each. In many instances, rescue squad and ambulance attendants receive their training from the same sources.

Welch sees some of the best training his men receive as that gained by assisting hospital personnel, on request, in emergency rooms after patients are brought in by ambulance.

Ambulance operators contend that their vehicles are better designed and equipped for proper patient treatment and conveyance work.

Seidl said that since rescue squad business has picked up, he has found in increasingly difficult to keep qualified men on a standby basis, especially on weekends. The men know the rescue squad is going on runs that his firm should be getting, Seidl said.

Seidl believes many people call the rescue squad because they feel they will not have to pay the $25 transportation fee.

The city finance director's office does the billing for rescue squad runs. Although Finance Director David Champion refused to release the collection figures for 1970, it was learned that the city sent 238 bills, totaling $5,950 for rescue squad services, of which only 135 were paid, with collections totaling $3,390.

One source said that little attempt is made to collect from persons who do not pay for rescue squad service.

Welch feels the fire department probably will get its new emergency vehicle.

Seidl says he doesn't think the measure will pass the City Council. "The people of Appleton are getting sick and tired of the city being in the ambulance business," he said.

"The next thing you know, the city will be opening a supermarket, gas station or department store," he remarked.

Sewerage Problem . . .

Michigan Ave., has had high water problems for 10 years, including seepage into his basement. He fears that some of the sewerage may be contaminating that water, which gets up to two feet deep at the end of his property line.

He cited the sewerage drainage from the mobile home park. "It's obnoxious and it's a health hazard."

The city has pumped the water from his yard twice, and he dug a trench through his property once in efforts to prevent the flooding.

Mrs. Pickett says she contacted the city health department last year and it issued a warning but never followed through. It has no jurisdiction out of the city.

She says she contacted her alderman Monday night, and the city health inspector was scheduled to inspect the sewerage pool today.

The State Division of Health sent a sanitarian to the mobile home park nearly three years ago, and in a June 5, 1968 report, he recommended that the park be connected with public sewers.

But the problems still exists — and the stinking green stuff keeps bubbling up from the ground.

on the board are Supvs. Hermin Ripp and William Friend of Appleton and Eugene Retzlaff of Hortonville. They replace Supvs. Norman Austin, Oneida, Theodore Jens and Mrs. Rose Schroeder of Appleton.

In addition to the five supervisors members, Woehler appointed Ronald Scheid, secretary of the Appleton Labor Council, and Eugene Porter, second vice president and director of financial analysis for the Aid Association for Lutherans, as voting citizen members.

All seven appointments were confirmed by the board without dissent.

Supv. Eugene Kloes, Appleton, a frequent critic of the county highway department, was elected to the highway committee, defeating incumbent member Supv. Merritt Kavanaugh, Kaukauna.

Returned to the committee were its chairman Supv. Ervin Conradt, Shiocton, and members George Kroes, Town of VandenBroek; Daniel Williams, Combined Locks; and I. A. Grunwaldt, Black Creek.

All five were elected on the first ballott, with Grunwaldt getting 34 votes; Conradt, 33; Kloes, 28; and Williams and Kroes, each 27.

Kavanaugh got 25 while Supv. Joseph Kasperek received 18 and Austin got 17.

Wedding Bells to Ring For Daley's Opponent

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A Chicago man who opposed Mayor Richard J. Daley in Chicago's April 6 election applied for a marriage license Monday with the daughter of the village president of suburban River Hills.

The marriage application was filed in the Milwaukee County clerk's office by attorney Richard E. Friedman, 41, and Miss Marjorie Anne Lueloff, 30, a television reporter in Chicago.

The license application said a May 1 ceremony is planned in River Hills.

ton attorney, filed the damage suit in the U. S. District Court for the Eastern District of Wisconsin. Citing the judge's protection under judicial immunity, the court granted a motion for a summary judgment dismissing the suit.

The U. S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, in affirming the action of the district court, said, "The conduct of the county judge . . . is shocking and there would appear to be no justification for such conduct . . ."

The court also stated, "Obviously, the use of his jurisdiction to coerce the reimbursement of allegedly owed legal fees was a clear abuse of power, especially when other channels existed for recovery of any such legal fees which might have been owed."

Although the appeals court noted that it had found nothing in Wisconsin statutes which expressly grants to judges in criminal cases the authority to attach conditions to bail that do not directly relate to assuring the defendant's appearance at trial, Schaefer, through "general jurisdiction," had power to attach some conditions to Jacobson's bail.

Protected From Suits

And, despite what the court viewed as Schaefer's abuse of power, it held that a judge is protected from damage suits under the doctrine of judicial immunity which, the appeals judges noted, ". . . is traditionally considered to be one of the best established of our common law doctrines."

In its opinion published this month, the appeals court wrote, ". . . even though a judge may be accused of malicious or corrupt conduct, he still will be immune from a damage suit for acts committed within his jurisdiction.

Citing a recent U. S. Supreme Court decision, the appeals judges said that such "immunity from damages is felt to be necessary to preserve the 'principled and fearless decision making' of the judiciary."

Jacobson was convicted on the charges for which the $3,000 bail had been set. A Door County judge, named after Schaefer disqualified himself, placed Jacobson on probation and ordered a jail sentence.

Jacobson, whose probation recently was revoked, resulting in his being sent to the reformatory, faces another drug charge.

A mistrial was declared in his case last month after his attorney was injured in a car accident. Jacobson is charged with furnishing marijuana to a 20-year-old Appleton police informer on Oct. 2.

Police & Fire Beat

Forfeiture proceedings to recover a $300 bond were initiated Monday against James Anthony Monsour, 34, 1226 W. Spring St., who failed to show for a court appearance on three counts of theft by fraud.

Appleton detectives charge that Monsour took $100 from three persons in Appleton July 1, 1970, and promised each a new television set the same day. Authorities said he never produced the sets.

The Outagamie County district attorney's office said Monsour failed to show for an earlier scheduled court appearance also.

school," he added.

The argument was supported by the fact that the programs for which the land could be used would probably not even involve the central facility.

Possible uses for the land had included use for adult and high school education, a truck driver program, agricultural and conservation programs and use for crop test pilots.

Frank Sprister, an Appleton board member, who cast the sole vote opposing the move to drop the option, said he felt that the $8,000 in interest would be incorporated in the purchase price.

"And if we decide not to buy it, all we're out is a few thousand dollars. But if we don't keep the option, and need the land, in the future, we might be out quite a bit more. How do we know what a board sitting here 10 years from now might have in mind and might not be able to accomplish simply because they don't have the land?" he asked.

"I think it is a lack of foresight," Sprister concluded before proposing the investigation of the 40-acres plot next to FVTI.

It is because of the uncertainty of future needs that most of the board members, as well as Sirek, were uncertain as to what to do.

Sirek gave some of the pros and cons for the property, but made no recommendation. At an earlier meeting he indicated that there was still quite a bit of land in the 140 acres on which the FVTI is being built, if a need arose.

Dominic Bordini, deputy director in charge of the construction of the six-building institute, indicated agreement with Sirek, adding that only a third of the property is being used for the building.

Bordini also informed the board that the construction of the $6 million complex is 50 per cent completed and that lawns, sidewalks and blacktopping will be done by summer.

Along with that, the board approved the administrative recommendations to move the health occupation programs from Neenah to the new facility. Earlier this year, the board approved relocating 10 other programs to the new facility.

Coming from Oshkosh will be automotive technology, machine tool operation, metal fabrication-welding and truck driving.

Moving from Appleton will be auto mechanics, auto body, machine tool operation, printing-graphic arts, agri-business and police science technology. All are effective in September.

In other business the board resolved to ask for legislation defining the rights of vocational technical boards in an effort to protect themselves in case the state universities and the University of Wisconsin are combined under a single board of higher education.

"It is our belief, that without specific role assignments in the statutes, the pressures of status, the economics of higher education and the pressures to override the enrollment plateau are certain to overwhelm the less obvious but more far reaching public interest in vocational-technical education.

"We ask, therefore that these principles be set forth clearly in the statutes by designating that the state vocational board be the responsible agency for the . . . supervision of programs leading to degrees below the baccalaureate level and for . . . full and part-time occupational offerings throughout the state," the resolution states.

With this the board approved membership in the Wisconsin Board Association of VTE, which was formed during the weekend in an effort to attain a better information exchange between state vocational districts and to safeguard interests.

Harland Kirchner, VTE-12 board president, was elected vice president of the state body.

Menasha Utility Sets Sights On Water, Electric Rate Hikes

MENASHA — The electric and water utilities commission is asking the city council for the chance to go before the Public Service Commission (PSC) and ask for water and electric rate increases.

They also want to get a revised rate schedule that would correct a situation where the two largest users of water in the city are using water which costs more for the utility to produce than the firms pay in rates.

The reasons for the rate increase are simple: higher material and labor costs, greater local taxes, higher fuel costs, etc.

In 1970, the water plant made a 1.74 per cent rate of return on assets. The electric utility made a 3.84 per cent return.

6 Pct. Return

The PSC allows a six per cent return. That's what the commission wants.

The commission didn't come in with a specific rate increase figure, althought they said it would be slight and, according to utility Supt. James Taylor, would still leave Menasha residents with lower electric rates than those being paid by people in surrounding communities who use private utility power.

Right now, Menasha power rates are about 15 per cent lower than they are in surrounding communities. Taylor said they "don't anticipate" the rate increase will "approach that."

The commission didn't specify a rate because the PSC sets it anyway, following a detailed presentation by the utility and an audit of the books by the PSC, justifying the increase.

1968 Increase

The last water rate increase was in 1968. The last major power electric rate increase actually reduced some rates since then.

Utilities Atty. Melvin Crowley estimated that if the utility can get before the PSC soon, and actions proceed without delay, the rate increase would be effective by the fall.

Crowley also noted that "if it hadn't been for the interconnection, we would have been in here a long time ago" asking for a rate increase. He was talking about the power line interconnection between Menasha and Kaukauna, designed to cut power costs and improve service.

It cost the utility $950,000.

The council will act tonight on two resolutions — one on water and one on electricity — that would give the utility authority to ask the PSC for a rate increase.

Menasha Looks to Lucey for Help

MENASHA — City officials are hoping that the chances for state and federal word on possible sewage plant expansion funding have improved after City Atty. Richard Steffens had a talk with an old friend last week: Gov. Patrick Lucey.

Steffens said the governor said he will use his office to "see if we can get a direct commitment" on funding from the state Department of Natural Resources and the Federal Water Qualification Quality Administration.

Sewerage commission and city officials have been waiting for such a commitment for some time.

Steffens, a former state assemblyman himself, said the governor told him he "would do all he can" to get the machinery of government rolling and provide the Twin Cities with some idea of what kind of federal and state aids they can expect for the proposed $17.2 million project.

'Tough on Pollution'

Steffens also said that "there's no question that he's (Lucey) going to be tough on pollution."

In related action Monday, aldermen heard a proposal from Mayor James Adams that the city's sewer user fee ordinance be changed so that current debt, as well as future debt, can be paid off through sewer user fee revenues rather than tax monies.

Despite past opposition from Third Ward Ald. Sumner Parker, who said it may not be legal, there was no discussion of the proposal Monday.

Adams also indicated he was upset with a proposal in Neenah to give persons who install sump pumps a break on the user fee.

He said he hoped that neither Neenah or Menasha "starts messing around that way" and possibly jeopardize the legality or operation of the user fee when it begins next January.

Boat Rentals

Sixth Ward Ald. Hugh (Bud) Geibel's proposal to make boat rental fees uniform throughout the city, at $10, was greeted coolly by some aldermen Monday.

Parker estimated that about $6,500 has been spent on the 62 stalls (50 at Jefferson Park and stalls (50 at Jefferson Park and 12 at Smith Park) and the $7.50 fee during most of that time has done little to offset the cost. Most improvements and maintenance has come from taxpayers.

Fourth Ward Ald. Richard Heindl, who has rented a stall since 1963, said there's been little maintenance and "no improvements as long as I've been there."

He said a fee raise (the park and recreation board raised it from $7.50 to $15 at Jefferson Park last December, and received unanimous council approval) is "not justified," and suggested that the board, which plans improvement projects for both sets of stalls, "start your fixing and then see what it costs and raise the fees then."

Geibel said Neenah has a $10 fee at its Doty Park stalls, and Receration Director William Miller told him the fee should stay the same for the foreseeable future. Park Supt. Thomas VanBuskirk had a letter from Miller, however, that said the fees should be raised.

Hurt Little Guy.

Sixth Ward Ald. Robert Winarski said the fee increase would hurt the little guy, and "only those who can afford it will be the lucky ones" who can get a stall in the future.

Fifth Ward Ald. Herbert Batley, however, asked "why should someone be subsidizing boat stalls (taxes) when they can't even afford a boat?"

Winarski said a person of moderate means may own "a skow with a three horsepower motor" that he's proud of, and raising the fee would hurt him.

Wainarski also suggested looking at similar services for similar cuts. He suggested driver education programs.

"Good," said Parker, "Let's go."

There was no further discussion.

Radio Station Is Moving To Neenah

NEENAH-MENASHA — WNRR-FM, which has been off the air for a week, will be off for a few more weeks depending on the delivery of new automated stereo broadcasting equipment and installation of adequate telephone lines.

According to Jerry Collins, owner of Collins Broadcasting Corp., which operates WNRR, the studio facilities, now in the Town of Harrison in Calumet County, had to be moved to comply with zoning regulations.

He said the studio would be moved to downtown Neenah because "our time was up in the agricultural zone."

"We will be able to leave the transmitter and tower out there (Calumet County) but we had to move the studios."

"So as long as we had to move anyway we decided to go with new automated equipment and add the ability to broadcast in stereo," Collins explained.

He pointed out that before the station can resume broadcasting the new equipment has to be proven out in audio testing. "The requirements for FM are very rigid," he explained.

Collins, who also owns and operates WQTC in Two Rivers and WLKE in Waupun, both AM stations, said that "within a year or so the 99.3 MC frequency will be changed. We plan to transfer the frequency to Waupun to add a FM station there and get a new frequency for Neenah-Menasha."

Collins pointed out that he also has an application in to the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) for an AM station in LaCrosse.

The decision to either stick with the present top 40 format of WNRR or to change hasn't been made, according to Collins. "At this point, we just aren't sure," he explained.

"However we will be on the air at least as many hours as we were," he said.

WNRR for the past three or four months has experimented with a 24-hour broadcast day.

New Ballpark Site Up for Approval

MENASHA — The city may have a ballpark site. Soon.

Mayor James Adams said this morning that he would ask the common council to authorize approval of a new site, a specific site, tonight.

It would be the beginning of the end of an issue that started back in 1967, when the city gave an option on the current ballpark land to International Wagenknecht. The company has said it will exercise the seven-year option before it expires.

Adams wouldn't say where the land site is, but he said that aldermen favored the site during an executive session Monday night after the committee-of-the-whole meeting.

He said the approval of the site, tonight, would "get a lot of things off our backs" and allow them to proceed on other matters.

One matter will be the money needed to develop a new ballpark. At least some of it will probably have to come out of city coffers.

Appeals Board to Air Church Building Plans

KAUKAUNA — The board of appeals will meet at 4 p.m. Thursday in the council chambers to consider the request of Immanuel United Church of Christ for a building permit for a new church.

A permit previously was turned down by Building Inspector Harold Loeser when plans showed that the building would not conform with side lot lines.

6-Inch Snow Blankets Conference on Youth

ESTES PARK, Colo. (AP) — Six inches of snow has blanketed this mountain community since Sunday night, sending delegates to the White House Conference on Youth scurrying into town for some hasty shopping.

Among the purchases were 40 pairs of mittens and 2,000 plastic garbage bags, which some delegates wore over their sandals.

Ft. Carson Army Base near Colorado Springs also sent the delegates 1,000 parkas to protect them against the near-freezing nighttime temperatures.

Garbage Pick-Up Cuts Opposed

MENASHA — A proposal to cut city garbage pickup operations in half rode through a blistery public hearing Monday, and the mayor said today that, "I would say it would be defeated" when it comes to the council for action tonight.

"The consensus seems to be that people would like the service (twice-per-week rather than once-per-week pickup) to continue, and are willing to pay for it," Adams said. "If they are, that's fine with me."

Aldermen also held a hearing on a proposed ordinance that would require bidders on public works projects to file prequalification papers with the city five days before project bids are opened. There was no opposition, and it will probably be passed tonight.

Six Spoke

Six persons spoke at the public hearing on the garbage ordinance last night. Five of them wanted twice-per-week pickup maintained.

Second Ward Ald. Walter Remmel said the people he'd talked to in his ward want twice-per-week service continued. Third Ward Ald. Sumner Parker, however, a strong backer of the proposed change as a way to save the city some money, said the people he's talked to want the change.

The proposal to require residents to use 30-gallon plastic bags for refuse came out of the hearing in worse shape than the service cutback idea. Parker said after the hearing that there weren't enough facts to know whether the bags would "be good or not."

Dirtier City

Some of the comments at the hearing:

—James Pfankuch, 733 Arthur St., said the cutback in service would result in a "dirtier city" and an "unhealthy situation" because garbage would have to sit around a full week awaiting pickup.

He said it would be especially hard on him — a father of seven children — because a large family tends to build up garbage faster.

—Charles Heinz, 337 First St., and a newly-elected First Ward alderman, said the city should give it a try, and if it doesn't work, revert back to the former system. He didn't like the idea of using bags, however, because he felt they would cost too much.

Heinz, who countered Pfankuch's argument by saying he had eight children and would nevertheless be willing to try the cutback, urged strong enforcement of the current garbage pickup ordinance. He said requirements for containers were often ignored.

He also said garbage crews sometimes leave can covers loose after they empty them into trucks, and he suggested the city "should pay for new covers" and then resell them to residents, who he said find it hard to buy new lids when they lose them.

—John C. Heinsohn, manager of the Riverside Clinic, said the clinic would "be a little hard-pressed" by once-per-week pickup because of the many items he said they must dispose of in a hurry.

Noting more than once that the clinic is a major taxpayer in the city, Heinsohn said "all those dirty biological things that come out of the clinic" and other refuse would make twice-per week pickup a necessity for the clinic.

"There may be other areas where you might look to save some money," he told the aldermen.

Cost of Bags

—Jim Walbrun, 823 Appleton St., asked "what about the old people" and retired persons? It would cost them money to buy the plastic bags (he said three of them sell for 97 cents).

—James Ray, 908 Harding St., said his area has "enough problems right now" without creating a situation he felt would lead to refuse buildup at residences.

"I don't want all that stuff laying alongside my gaarage for a week," he said.

—Don Kuehl, 838 Milwaukee St., a former alderman, said he could go along with the use of plastic bags to save time and money, but he opposed the change to once-per-week pickup.

—Parker, during the committee-of-the-whole session following the hearing, said "anytime we make an effort to save money someone is going to look at it as a reduction in services. . ."

He said he has received "overwhelming support" for the change — which he said would have saved about $45,000 in equipment and manpower costs this year.

Bullets Dethrone Knicks, Meet Bucks in Final Playoff Series

Milwaukee To be Site Of 1st Game

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee's high-flying Bucks wanted the New York Knicks, but the Baltimore Bullets will have to do.

"I hope we play New York for the (National Basketball Association) title," said guard Jon McGlocklin after the Bucks disposed of the Los Angeles Lakers to move into the NBA championship round. "I think we've got something to prove."

Baltimore, however, did it first, knicking the Knicks 93-91 in the Eastern Conference playoffs Monday night. The Bullets will take on the Bucks at the Milwaukee Arena Wednesday night at 8 p.m. (CST) in the first game of the best-of-seven series.

Better Team

"Our people would have preferred Knicks," admitted Bucks Coach Larry Costello. "But this is for the NBA championship and maybe Baltimore is a better team than New York."

Dick Cunningham, Milwaukee's reserve center, was impressed with the Bullets.

"They can play," he said. "We would rather play the world champs and dethrone them, but I think we match up real well with the Bullets."

"We're going to be in real good shape with this ball club," Cunningham said. "Bob Boozer can come off the bench and play John Tresvant and our forwards. Greg Smith and Bobby Dandridge, match up well with Gus Johnson and Jack Marin."

"Lucius Allen (a reserve guard) is going to help us in the backcourt. You need the speed to keep up with the Bullets," said Cunningham.

"Baltimore took New York through seven games last year before getting beat," Costello said. "This year they turned it around. That shows what we are up against."

Carter Goal Decisive in 93-91 Win

By BRUCE LOWITT

NEW YORK (AP) — Milwaukee?" said Gene Shue, a weary grin spreading across his face. "I'm not even thinking about the Bucks. I'm too happy!"

The often volatile coach looked as exhausted and elated as his Baltimore Bullets Monday night after they finally gained two seasons worth of revenge against the New York Knicks.

The Bullets, withstanding a fourth - quarter rally on the court—and game-long pandemonium by the 19,500 fans surrounding it in Madison Square Garden beat the Knicks 93-91 for the National Basketball Association's Eastern Conference crown.

Cruise to Title

That sends the Bullets into the best-of-seven championships against the Bucks, who cruised to the Western title by conquering the San Francisco Warriors and Los Angeles Lakers in five games apiece.

The confrontation begins Wednesday night in Milwaukee, nationally televised by ABC—as all the championship games will be — starting at 8 p.m., CST.

In Monday night's only other playoff action, Ray and Charlie Scott tossed in 30 points apiece as the Virginia Squires defeated Kentucky 150-137 to take a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven American Basketball Association Eastern Division finals. Utah, leading the Western series 2-1, hosts Indiana tonight.

Baltimore was shooting not only for the chance to face Milwaukee—the winningest team in the NBA this season—but for a chance to end frustration that began with the 1968-69 season.

Knocked Out

They won the regular-season Eastern title that time only to be knocked out by the third-place Knicks in four straight games in the first round of playoffs.

Then, last year, after losing five of six regular-season games to the Knicks, Baltimore again faced them in the first round—and again the Bullets lost, this time in seven games.

This season the Knicks again dominated, beating the Bullets in four of six games, then tak-

Several All-Fox Cities Players Headed for Out-of-State Schools

36 Athletes Are Feted by the Little Chute JCs

Marty Crowe, veteran Marinette Catholic Central football and basketball coach, sometimes admires an athlete more for his attitude than for his skills.

Crowe made the observation Monday night when he addressed the fifth annual all-Fox Cities dinner, sponsored by the Little Chute Jaycees, at the Darboy Club.

The speaker said he rejoices when he observes athletes with the proper attitudes. Crowe stressed the importance of attitude to the high school seniors who will go on to college. "You'll go to the status of nobody from somebody," he cautioned.

Many good players will be recruited and "you'll be just one more guy," he said. Inner strength and character will do the student-athletes as much good as their physical skills, he counselled.

"The strongest ones in character will prevail in the competition," Crowe added.

Crowe also pointed out the importance of compassion, dedication and courage in sports and gave examples of each.

The 36 members of the all-Fox Cities football and basketball teams were honored. . .and all were on hand to receive their awards (trophies from the Jaycees and certificates from The Post-Crescent).

Cagers honored were Rick Matson, Bill Schultz, Tim Moriarty, Rich Reitzner, Mollen, Nick Milhauot, Don Uelmen, Ike Chestnut, Collar, Tim Wainscott, Leon Franzke, Tim O'Dell, Dennis Kasten, Mark Hammen, John Pierce and Don Werner.

Two of Wisconsin's premier high school basketball players from the Fox Cities are headed for out-of-state universities, it was learned at the All-Fox Cities banquet Monday night at the Darboy Club.

Appleton West's Tim Moriarty and Neenah Shattuck's Rick Matson, both 6-5 centers who were first-team selections on the 1970-71 Associated Press All-State squad as well as All-Fox Cities unit, will attend southwestern schools, with Moriarty going to Rice and Matson apparently bound for Oklahoma.

Although Moriarty is firm in his commitment to the Texas school, Matson said he is still considering the Universities of Arizona, Utah, and Minnesota at this date. He favors Oklahoma, however, because of its strong geological engineering major.

Other members of the All-Fox Cities cage team also indicated they will seek to further their educations next fall, and most are looking toward state schools.

Narrows Choices

Appleton West's Rich Reitzner has narrowed his choices to Eau Claire, Stevens Point or the University of Wisconsin, while Neenah's Bill Schultz is eyeing Notre Dame or Eau Claire.

Little Chute's Steve Mollen will enter River Falls, and Appleton East's Nick Milhaupt is leaning toward either Winona State (Minn.) or LaCrosse.

More senior basketball players and their picks of schools include Kimberly's Don Uelmen, Oshkosh State; Xavier's Mark Collar, Northern Illinois (he received a football scholarship from the school); St. Mary's Tim Wainscott, St. Norbert; Kaukauna's Leon Franzke, LaCrosse; Xavier's Tim O'Dell, Stevens Point or Whitewater; Fox Valley Lutheran's Dennis Kasten, Fox Valley Campus.

The Bulls signed their No. 1 pick, 6-7 Kenneth McIntosh of Eastern Michigan, last week.

Brewers' Quinn to Headline Foxes' Banquet Thursday

Bob Quinn, director of minor league operations for the Milwaukee Brewers, will be the guest speaker at Thursday night's "Welcome Home" banquet for the Appleton Foxes.

Manager Joe Sparks will introduce the 1971 Foxes baseball team to the public at the 14th annual affair, being held at the Columbus Club, in Appleton.

Quinn, who is the son of former Milwaukee Braves and now Philadelphia general manager John Quinn, came to the Brewers from the Omaha Royals — American Association champions.

A 1958 graduate of Marquette University, Quinn started in baseball as business manager of the Eau Claire Braves of the Class C Northern League in 1959. He left that organization and baseball in the fall of 1960 and became an official with the Northern States Power Company. Quinn later became an executive with the Frank H. Fleer Corp.

He returned to baseball in November of 1966 with the Reading (Pa.) Phillies of the Eastern League. His team led the league in attendance in 1967 and '68, for which he was awarded the 1967 Eastern League "Executive Of The Year" title. The Sporting News similarly named him Class AA executive Of The Year.

The Kansas City Royals named Quinn general manager of Omaha in '69 and he directed that club to the attendance leadership of the American Association — again winning Executive Of The Year honors. The Omaha club finished the '70 season second in overall attendance.

Quinn, 34, lettered three years in track and captained the track team in his senior year at MU.

The dinner and program will start at 7 p.m. and some tickets are still available.

Bryant Impressive as Giants Win 9th

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

There's a job for Ron Bryant in the San Francisco Giants' starting rotation, but he may become eligible for unemployment compensation waiting for it.

The 23-year-old left-hander took over for ailing Frank Reberger with none out in the first inning Monday and went the rest of the way in a 4-2 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals. It was the Giants' ninth consecutive victory.

With Juan Marichal and Gaylord Perry slated to pitch tonight and Wednesday and off-days scheduled Thursday and next Monday, it will be late next week before Bryant gets his shot.

Bryant relieved Reberger with two runners on base and Jose Cardenal's double put the Cardinals in front 1-0. But the Giants quickly tied it up against Jerry Reuss on Willie Mays' double and a single by Dick Dietz and took the lead in the third on Chris Speier's single, a walk to Mays and another single by Dietz.

Bonds Homers

Bryant singled in the fifth and scored on a bases-loaded walk and Bobby Bonds crashed his fifth home run of the season for the final tally. Bryant yielded eight hits and fanned eight. He finally gave up a run in the ninth on two singles rapped around a wild pitch.

Elsewhere on a slim major league schedule, Los Angeles defeated San Diego 3-2, Minnesota outlasted Kansas City 9-8 and Cleveland nipped Boston 5-4 in 13 innings.

The Padres took a 2-0 lead off Don Sutton in the first inning on four singles and a walk, but the Dodgers bounced back with a run in the third on doubles by Willie Davis and Wes Parker. They won it in the eighth when Davis and Parker singled and, after a sacrifice and an intentional walk, Billy Grabarkewitz lashed a two-run double.

Killer in Control

Harmon Killebrew drove in six runs as Minnesota built a 9-0 lead and then survived a Kansas City counter-attack, including Bob Oliver's grand slam homer.

Killebrew delivered a two-run single in the first, a run-scoring grounder in the second and his second homer of the season, a three-run shot, in the third. The Royals nicked Jim Kaat for a run in the fourth and chased

Fred Still Loves Game

Carter's Play Pleases His Former Coach

EMMITSBURG, Md. (AP) — Fred Carter, a hero of the National Basketball Association playoffs, hasn't changed much since his days on the Philadelphia playgrounds.

At least, that's how Jim Phelan, basketball coach of Mount St. Mary's, views the second-year guard of the Baltimore Bullets whose last minute basket Monday night eliminated New York 93-91 in the NBA's Eastern Conference finals.

"Freddie still has the same zest for the game that most of us had when we were 13 or 14 years old," Phelan said, soon after the Bullets advanced to the championship round against the Milwaukee Bucks.

Loves Game

"While most guys eventually get enough of basketball," Phelan said, "Freddie is still in love with the game. He plays the same way in the NBA as he does with kids at my summer camp. It's just fascinating."

Phelan, a successful coach whose Mount St. Mary's team once won the NCAA small college title, remembers first seeing Carter perform on the famed Philadelphia playgrounds which have produced many a pro star.

"I went there to scout John Baum," Phelan recalled, "but John said he wanted to go to Temple University. So I talked with Freddie, and asked him if he were interested in going to school."

Carter, who had dropped out of high school but had completed his credits while working, told Phelan he wanted to attend college, and he soon headed for Mount St. Mary's.

"It was almost just that Freddie make the winning basket," Phelan said. "He had played so well during the series. I'm so happy for him."

Here's an oddity . . . In baseball's National League pennant playoff between the Pirates and Reds last season, the home team's runs, hits and errors in all the games always totaled eight, and the visiting team always totaled 12! . . . The Reds were the visiting team in the first two games and had 3 runs, 9 hits, 0 errors in the 1st game; and 3 runs, 8 hits, 1 error in the 2nd game . . . The Pirates were the visiting team in the 3rd and last game and had 2 runs, 10 hits, 0 errors, so all the visiting teams totaled 12 . . . Meanwhile, the Pirates were the home team for the first two games and got 0 runs, 8 hits, 0 errors in the 1st game; and 1 run, 5 hits, 2 errors in the 2nd game . . . The Reds were at home for the 3rd game and got 3 runs, 5 hits, 0 errors, so the home team always totaled eight!

Can you guess which fish are the fastest swimmers in the world? . . . They are the blue marlin, swordfish and sailfish . . . Each can swim 50 miles an hour, which is faster than horses can run.

Would you say Babe Ruth or Ralph Kiner led a major league in home runs the most consecutive years? . . . The answer, surprisingly, is Kiner . . . He led the National League in homers seven straight seasons while the most consecutive years Ruth ever led the American League in homers was six.

'Rock' Curio Appeals To Lovers of Music

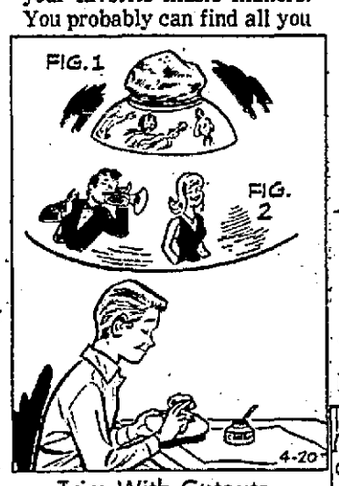
BY CAPPY DICK

If you are a "rock" music fan, today's homemade curio is a project likely to appeal to you. It is a display that features an actual rock glued to a foundation decorated with cutouts of your favorite musicians.

Start preparing this curio by searching for the most interesting rock you can find. It should be of a size that will fit on a saucer turned bottom-side up as in figure 1. Scrub the rock to remove any particles of sand or dirt clinging to it.

Round up an old, discarded saucer to serve as the base. Glue the rock to it. After the glue has dried, holding the rock firmly in place, proceed with the decoration by collecting small pictures of your favorite music makers. You probably can find all you will need in newspaper and magazine advertisements.



Trim With Cutouts

The completed display will be an interesting music-related curio to place on your desk or dresser.

'Big O' Four Victories Away From Goal

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Oscar Robertson is four victories away from his goal—the National Basketball Association championship.

The "Big O" and his Milwaukee Bucks teammates will begin their best-of-seven games series against the Baltimore Bullets Wednesday night at the Milwaukee Arena for the NBA title.

For most of the Bucks, including Oscar, this marks the first time they've played in the championship series.

"It's not just me," Oscar said Monday, somewhat on the defensive. "The majority of the players in the NBA have never gotten this far. Since I've been in the league, only five teams have ever played for the title—Nw York, Boston, Los Angeles, Philadelphia and San Francisco."

Hawks in Series

You have to forgive Oscar if his memory isn't exactly perfect. In his first year in the NBA, the 1960-61 season, the Boston Celtics defeated the St. Louis Hawks for the crown.

Since then, the Hawks have moved to Atlanta and the title series has been somewhat of a round-robin affair between the other five teams.

Boston has played in the finals eight times, winning each time, and the Los Angeles Lakers have played in seven, all on the losing end, since Robertson graduated from the University of Cincinnati and joined the pros.

San Francisco's Warriors have played twice and the Philadelphia 76ers won in their only appearance in 1967.

Championship Team

Robertson, who starred for the Cincinnati Royals in his first 10 years in the league, was traded to the Bucks prior to the start of the 1970-71 season. At the time, he said the main factors for his approving the deal—a condition of his contract—was the chance to play on a championship team and with an outstanding big center, in this case Lew Alcindor.

"I thought this would be an opportunity I had wanted since the beginning of my career," Robertson said then.

With Alcindor, the league's top scorer and most valuable player, and the "Big O", the Bucks ripped off a record 20 straight victories enroute to a runaway of the Midwest Division. Milwaukee then downed San Francisco, four games to one, and Los Angeles by an identical margin.

That brings them into the NBA finals and the Baltimore Bullets bring Oscar to within four victories of his goal.

Bucks Second To Play for 1,000,000

MILWAUKEE (AP) — More than a million fans have watched the Milwaukee Bucks in action this season, the National Basketball Association team announced Monday.

In 82 regular season games, both home and away, the Bucks drew 883,985, while an additional 124,512 have watched Milwaukee's 10 playoff games for a total of 1,008,497, the club said.

The Bucks are only the second team to play before a million fans in a season. In 1969, the New York Knicks became the first NBA team to reach the attendance mark, then repeated last year.

Frank Gifford Joins ABC

To Do Play-by-Play On Monday Night NFL Telecasts

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Gifford, a New York Giants football star turned sportscaster, will join the American Broadcasting Co. next month, Roone Arledge, ABC sports president, announced Monday.

Gifford will become the play-by-play announcer for ABC's Monday night telecasts of National Football League games. He will also appear on other ABC national sports shows and nightly on the network's New York station, WABC-TV.

Asked what effect Gifford's sportscasts on WABC-TV would have on the status of Jim Bouton, the former major league baseball player and author of the controversial best-seller "Ball Four," a network spokesman said, "I have no idea."

Bouton has been a WABC-TV sportscaster for nearly a year.

Arledge's announcement said Gifford would team with Don Meredith and Howard Cosell on the pro football telecasts. Play-by-play announcing for the NFL games on ABC last season was done by Keith Jackson.

Gifford has been with WCBS-TV as a sportscaster for several years.

Monroe Cites Great Pressure

Bullets Silence Garden Mob

NEW YORK (AP) —"I'd rather have won here than anywhere else in the world," an exhausted Jack Marin said Monday night after he and the rest of the Baltimore Bullets held off New York 93-91 in the seventh and deciding game of the National Basketball Association Eastern Conference finals.

Marin had 20 points to back up Earl Monroe's 26 as the Bullets silenced the Madison Square Garden crowd of 19,500 which had begun screaming for the Knicks to repeat their performance of a year ago, when they beat Baltimore in seven games en route to the league championship.

"I've played in pressure situations before," Monroe said, "but nothing of this magnitude."

Bullets Recover

Coach Gene Shue, who takes his team against the Western champion Milwaukee Bucks in the best-of-7 championship series starting Wednesday night in Milwaukee, also said it was "easy to get rattled in the Garden," and acknowledged the Bullets were just that in the opening 24 minutes.

"We were on edge in that first half," he said. "We were really struggling sometimes. But in the third quarter we started settling down. We were getting the easier shots—and sometimes two and three at a time, which was a big help—and we were making them," Shue said.

"But that last quarter was really see-saw. I'd really hate to have seen what might have happened if the Knicks had gotten in front."

Short Head

The Knicks did, in fact, hold the lead for just a moment when Dick Barnett, New York's high scorer with 26 points, hit a layin to put them ahead 87-86 with 2:44 remaining.

But Monroe's jumper 10 seconds later put the Bullets back on top to stay. And Fred Carter's 19-footer with 1:08 to play was the basket that gave them the game.

Walt Frazier got the Knicks' last field goal with about a minute to play—and the New York strategy was to have him shoot for the tying basket when New York, trailing by two points, got the ball with 11 seconds to play.

"They overplayed me," Frazier said of the Bullets' defense "and I had to give off to (Bill) Bradley."

Bradley's 15-footer from the left side of the hoop fell short with three seconds to play and Baltimore pounced on the ball—and the title.

"I went into the corner and saw Wes Unseld coming," Bradley said, "and I knew my only chance was to fall back and shoot—and Wes nicked the ball."

Williams Berlin Star

Patriot Track Team Notches 76-51 Victory

Berlin's Gary Williams was the outstanding performer of the meet, but Appleton East used better balance for a 76-51 dual triumph on the rain-slick Patriot track Monday.

Williams skimmed over the 120-yard high hurdles in 14.8 seconds, setting a new East track record, for one of his three victories. He also won the 180-yard low hurdles in 21.1 seconds and took the 220 in 23.5.

Helping offset Williams' efforts for East was Steve Neuman, who put the shot 48 feet, 10 inches and the discus 1345-5 for two winning efforts.

East also swept both relays as Mike Denil, Jim Schinke, Dan Plamann and Randy Leach came home first in the 880 with a 2:04.5-clocking and Dave Muench, Tim Werner, John Ciske and John Dingledein combined for a time of 3:42.1 in the mile.

Other East winners were Peter Ducklow in the 880 (2:04.5), Werner in the mile (4:32.5), Jim Vandenberg in the high jump (5-6¾) and Paul Kern in the pole vault (10-6).

The Pats swept both the 880 and mile run events.

Russ Hodges Dies at 60

Announced Giants' Baseball Games For 22 Years

MILL VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Russ Hodges, for 22 years the voice of the Giants National League baseball club on radio and television, is dead at 60.

Hodges collapsed at his home here Monday night and was dead on arrival at Marin General Hospital. An autopsy was scheduled to determine cause of death.

Although he retired from full-time broadcasting after the 1970 season, Hodges continued on the Giants' public relations staff and occasionally did broadcasts.

He was best remembered for his broadcast of the Giants' playoff game with the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1951, prior to the club's move from New York to San Francisco in 1958.

When Bobby Thompson hit a home run to win the playoff, Hodges shouted into the microphone over and over again: "Giants win the pennant Giants win the pennant!"

'Bye-Bye Baby'

His "Bye-bye baby" when a player connected for a home run was well known to thousands of fans.

National League President Charles Feeney said Hodges' death was "a tremendous loss to me personally, to the city of San Francisco and to all of baseball. He was one of the finest men I knew."

Born in Dayton, Ky., a Cincinnati suburb, Hodges attended the University of Kentucky where he was a halfback on the football team. He earned a law degree in 1929 but began broadcasting sports in college and never practiced law.

After sports broadcasting in Cincinnati and Chicago, Hodges went to New York to cover the New York Yankees with Mel Allen, then switched to the Giants in 1949. During the 1950s he announced the "Fight of the Week" on CBS television.

He is survived by his widow, Gay, whom he married in 1962, and a son and daughter by a previous marriage. Funeral arrangements were pending.

Unemployed Runner Takes Boston Event

Mejia Wins Exciting Marathon

BOSTON (AP) — Alvaro Mejia, an unemployed metal worker from Colombia via Redwood City, Calif., was the proud owner of a diamond studded solid gold sunburst medal and a laurel wreath today after a dramatic victory in the 75th Boston A.A. Marathon.

The 30-year-old Mejia, who finished 10th in the 10,000-meter run in the 1968 Olympics, registered his greatest triumph by out-kicking favored Irish Pat McMahon Monday in a stirring race to the wire at the end of the 26-mile, 385-yard grind from Hopkinton to Boston.

Mejia, who edged McMahon in the Colombian's first marathon in California earlier this year, and the former Irish Olympian, now a school teacher in nearby Lowell, engaged in one of the hottest duels in BAA history.

They ran abreast virtually all the way, often accidentally bumping elbows and even sharing water-soaked sponges handed one or the other by spectators. Then, with the finish line just around the corner, Mejia, turned sprinter and hit the wire about 20 yards ahead of his weary rival.

Alverno Mejia

Mejia was timed in 2 hours, 18 minutes, 45 seconds, just five seconds faster than McMahon.

Mejia said he was laid off from his job five weeks ago, just two weeks after his wife gave birth to a son. His wife is the former Terry Stickell, a U.S. Olympic team diver. They met while she was in the Peace Corps and they plan to return to Colombia. McMahon said he was bothered by blisters and a headwind the field of 887 starters had to buck. The sunny weather was also a little too warm for him.

South Africa's John Halvestadt closed strongly to take third place in 2:22.23. John Vitale of New Haven, Conn., was fourth in 2:22.45, and Byron Lowry of San Francisco fifth in 2:23.20.

Denmark Wins Over Bay Port

The Denmark High School baseball team won its second straight non-conference game with a 4-1 decision over Bay Port Monday afternoon.

With the score tied, 1-1, in the top of the fourth, the Vikings' Tom Van Groll slapped a 2-run double to put the visitors ahead for good.

Harvey Shusta, who relieved Jerry Leiterman in the third inning, was the winning pitcher. Together they allowed only two hits. Gary Hilbert was the loser.

Semi-Pro Team Prospects Should Mail Information

Players wishing to try out for the Appleton semi-pro baseball team are asked to send post cards to John Hennessy or Herb Horn, at the Northern State Bank, 402 E. Wisconsin Ave., Appleton.

Team prospects should include their name, address, age, probable position, previous baseball experience, height and weight.

Tryouts will be held in about three weeks, according to Horn, the field manager. The club plays its first games in early June.

On another team note, Horn said that five sponsors were still being sought for uniforms for this season.

Antiwar March Slated in Oshkosh

OSHKOSH — About 4,000 persons are expected to march and rally here Wednesday for immediate withdrawal from Southeast Asia according to members of the Oshkosh Peace Action Coalition, sponsors of the march and rally.

Kevin Treptow, an Oshkosh State University student and chairman of the coalition, said he hoped "the entire population of Oshkosh would join the march and attend the rally, but it is reasonable to expect 4,000."

The Oshkosh Police Department has granted permits to the group. The march and rally will be legal and peaceful, coalition members guarantee. Students and faculty will serve as march marshals.

The march and rally is in conjunction with National Peace Action Week and precede national demonstrations Saturday in Washington, D. C., and San Francisco.

Labor Unions Invited

To date, the coalition is comprised of various student groups, but labor unions in the area have been invited to join.

Treptow said the march and rally was planned for the evening so more working people and citizens could participate. He said it will give citizens the opportunity to show their feelings on the war.

Marchers will meet at two locations before the walk begins around 6 p.m. The Dempsey Mall on the OSU campus and the courthouse have been designated meeting areas.

The student contingent will start from the Dempsey Mall and march west on McKone Avenue to High Street to Dawes Avenue and the courthouse to join the other marchers.

From the courthouse, the march will head south on Jackson Street to High Avenue, north on Main Street to Church Avenue, and back to the courthouse for the rally.

The rally is expected to begin about 7 p.m. on the lighted front steps of the courthouse.

Rally Speakers

Rally speakers include the Rev. Allan W. Frank, a founder of the Church of Reconciliation and a chaplain at the University Fellowship at Oakland University, Rochester, Mich.

Martha Quin, Madison, a woman's liberationist, will speak about women and the war and why they should be antiwar.

Joan Kaeding, an Oshkosh Public Library librarian, will give the antiwar sentiments of labor.

Tom Tomasko, a member of the Student Mobilization Committee to End the War, will give his group's position and reasons for demanding immediate withdrawal of American troops.

Treptow will give a general analysis of the problems evolving from the war.

The ecologists' views on the war, the Vietnam Veterans' reasons for antiwar sentiments, and perhaps a retired United Auto Worker organizer are other tentative speakers and views, Treptow said.

Roy Foster's two-run homer in the 13th inning lifted Cleveland past Boston in the Red Sox' annual Patriots Day game. The homer, off Bill Lee, followed a lead off walk to Graig Nettles. The Sox scored a run in their half of the inning before Ray Lamb picked up the final out with two runners aboard.

Former Red Sox slugger Ken Harrelson put the Indians in front with a three-run homer in the fourth but Boston tied it with two in the sixth and an unearned tally in the eighth.

Bullets Take Eastern Title

ing the first two playoff games in New York.

Baltimore finally woke up at home however, and smothered the Knicks twice to even the series. Each team then won its next home game to set up the finale.

The Knicks had held leads of 21-19 after one period and 47-43 after two. But a foul shot and two field goals put the Bullets in front in the opening minutes of the third quarter and they pulled away to a seven-point lead—the biggest by either team—in its closing seconds.

New York slowly battled back and finally went in front 88-87 with 2:44 to go on a lay-in by Dick Barnett, New York's top scorer with 26 points.

But Monroe, who topped Baltimore with 26, got the Bullets back on top with a 15-foot jumper just 10 seconds later and they stayed there the rest of the way.

Fred Carter's 19-footer with about a minute to play was the deciding one, giving them a 93-89 lead. Walt Frazier got the Knicks back within a basket moments later and the flashy guard, using center Willis Reed as a shield, was supposed to shoot for the equalizer when they got the ball with 11 seconds to play.

But the Baltimore defense stiffened and Frazier was forced to pass to Bill Bradley, whose 15-footer was tipped by Wes Unseld and fell short.

"I'm realizing it slowly, but it'll be a few days before I really feel it," Frazier said. "But the hard part comes when I have to watch the championship series on television."

And Reed, who hit 24 despite being hobbled by bad knees and a painful right shoulder, added: "Everything being equal, they outplayed us in the series. If they play as well as they did against us, they could give Milwaukee a real battle."

Massage Is Help, Not Cure for Arthritis

BY G. C. THOSTESON, M. D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have arthritis. Someone has suggested that I go to a masseur who can cure you forever by working on your cords and muscles. I understand this could involve years of this particular treatment plus being costly, so I'd like your advice before I take the step. — Mrs. J.

Arthritis is a condition in the joints, not in the "cords and muscles". So my advice to you is: don't go. Massage won't cure arthritis.

I don't mean that massage does not have its uses in treating arthritis. When arthritis distorts joints out of shape, it can result in muscular distortion as well in some cases. (Not all, by any means.) Massage, properly applied, can relieve muscle spasms, and take some of the strain off the afflicted joints, but it can't cure the trouble in the joints.

Likewise there are various types of arthritis, some of which (like gouty arthritis) can be treated with great success. Different types call for different treatment methods. I suggest that you send for my booklet, "How You Can Control Arthritis," which will give you a working knowledge of the various types, and what can help you, and what might be dangerous for you, and what can't help you. Send 35 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dr. Thosteson, care of The Post-Crescent, for a copy of the booklet.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What causes cracking in the corners of my mouth? — I am 62.—T.Y.

Once the skin at the corner of the mouth cracks, it is difficult to heal, as in any area where there is such frequent movement.

As to the underlying causes, a vitamin deficiency may be involved, and a daily capsule of B-complex (containing thiamin, riboflavin, nicotinic acid, etc.) may be helpful.

In any case, avoid licking the lips.

Pipe or cigar smokers sometimes have this trouble.

Infection, whether fungus or bacterium, can prevent healing. (In some cases, therefore, an antibiotic ointment helps.)

Sensitivity to foods, cosmetics, material in or used with dentures, may be a factor sometimes.

Seeing your physician or a skin specialist is recommended, rather than trying to guess the cause by yourself.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter would like to become a beautician. However, I have heard of a beauty operator who died of "beautician's lung". Is there really such a disease, and does it eventually affect all operators? It is rather easy for me to believe this is happening since the introduction of hair spray and lacquers. — Mrs. W.B.

At one time, not too long ago, it was thought that hair sprays affected the lungs. Subsequently further investigation of cases of lung ailments has disproved this theory — the diseases turned out to be from other causes not related to the sprays. I see no objection to your daughter becoming a beautician.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What can I take to get rid of pinworms? I reckon they are pinworms. They are about like a little white thread. — Mrs. J.W.M.

Well, that's what pinworms look like. I'd suggest that you have your doctor prescribe one or another of the medications effectively used for getting rid of these pests. Children in the family should be checked as well. Scrupulous cleanliness is essential, especially of the hands.

Of all the problems that pediatricians encounter in children, pinworm is the commonest. To learn the newest methods of treatment, write for the booklet, "The Commonest Pest, Pinworm," enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover printing and handling.

Hedlund Promoted At Bergstrom Paper

NEENAH — A. R. Hedlund, treasurer of Bergstrom Paper Co. since 1956, Monday was elected vice president for finance. Succeeding him as treasurer is Norman C. Young, controller and assistant treasurer since 1968.

The elections came at a meeting of Bergstrom's board of directors following the annual meeting of the company's stockholders.

At the same time, it was announced that Gary R. Kinsella has been appointed to the post of controller to succeed Young. Kinsella has been assistant controller since joining the company in 1969.

Directors also declared a first quarter dividend of 15 cents per share on the company's common stock, payable May 20, 1971, to stockholders of record May 4, 1971.

Directors Re-elected

Bergstorm's nine directors were re-elected by shareholders.

Hedlund joined Bergstrom as controller in 1945. He was named assistant treasurer and controller in 1950 and became treasurer and controller in 1956. He was elected to the board in 1954.

Young joined the company as assistant controller in 1957. He became assistant treasurer and assistant controller in 1959 and controller and assistant treasurer in 1968.

Re-elected directors are Harry H. Kirby, executive vice president for production and personnel, West Publishing Co.; Carl E. Steiger, president, Steiger-Rathke Development Co.; W. Mead Stillman, chairman and president, Wisconsin National Life Insurance Co.; Harry D. Wolfe, professor in the School of Business, University of Wisconsin; N. H. Bergstrom, retired; B. B. Fisher, retired; H. R. Moore, President of Bergstrom; D. W. Bergstrom, executive vice president, Bergstrom and Hedlund.

Elected officers were Moore, president and chief executive officer; D. W. Bergstrom, executive vice president; R. W. Wand, administrative vice president; C. L. Hess, vice president and production manager; W. R. Thompson, vice president and sales manager; Hedlund, and Young.

Also appointed at the meeting were M. J. Williams, assistant vice president, manager — special product sales; E. M. Bishop, assistant vice president, manager — book publishing sales, and Kinsella.

Allis-Chalmers May Alter Name To A-C Corp.

Allis - Chalmers stockholders will be asked May 12 to change the name of the company to Allis-Chalmers Corp.

The firm is known as the Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Co. under the present certificate of incorporation. In 1965, it adopted a trademark and corporate logotype which refers to the firm simply as Allis-Chalmers. That will remain unchanged, officials said.

A proxy solicitation statement issued by A-C said the proposed name is brief and "better identifies the company as more than a manufacturer of the products it sells, since the consolidated business now also includes the distribution, sale and servicing of products manufactured by others and the furnishing of financing and other services."

Shareholders also will elect 11 directors at the annual meeting. One new nominee, S. Hazard Gillespie, a partner in a New York law firm, is slated for election. He would succeed Fred Bohen, chairman and chief executive officer of the Meridth Corp., Des Moines, Iowa, who is retiring after 21 years on the board.

Woman's Body Believed That of UPI Journalist

PHNOM PENH (AP) — The remains of a woman found last weekend southwest of Phnom Penh are presumed to be those of Kate Webb, the United Press International correspondent in Cambodia who dispppeared in an ambush April 8, UPI said today.

Miss Webb, a native of New Zealand and an Australian citizen, is the ninth foreign journalist known to have been killed in Cambodia since the Vietnam war spread across the border. Another 19 foreign reporters and photographers are missing.

Miss Webb, 28, and a Japanese cameraman were with a battalion of Cambodian paratroopers who were ambushed 57 miles southwest of Phnom Penh on Highway 4. One Cambodian soldier told newsmen he saw enemy soldiers grab the woman and drag her into the jungle.

Cambodian troops returned to the scene of the ambush eight days later and said they found the body of a foreign woman with extensive head and chest wounds more than a mile from the point where Miss Webb was last seen. The troops cremated the body, and the remains were brought to Phnom Penh.

UPI correspondent Kim Willenson said he talked with one of the Cambodians who found the body. The man said he had seen Miss Webb previously and he was certain the body was hers.

Drugs Found Rarely Used by Men in Combat

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate subcommittee staff report said today drug abuse is on the upswing in the armed forces but rarely occurs in combat.

"We did not find the use of drugs had a significant, direct impact upon the military mission of the armed services," said investigators for the subcommittee on alcoholism and narcotics who visited bases in the United States, Europe and the Far East.

"While we were made aware of rare, isolated instances where marijuana had been used in combat situations in Vietnam, we saw no evidence that any mission or operation had been jeopardized by drug abuse," they said.

Serious Problem

The subcommittee chairman, Sen. Harold E. Hughes, D-Iowa, said the report shows the military is "confronted with a critical and epidemic problem" of drug abuse.

His conclusion was buttressed by two House members, Reps. Morgan F. Murphy, D-Ill., and Robert H. Steel, R-Conn., who said in Saigon Monday: "The problem has reached epidemic proportions."

Sent by the House Foreign Affairs Committee to Turkey, Iran, Laos, Thailand and South Vietnam to look into the military drug problem, the two congressmen estimated 10 to 15 per cent of the U.S. troops in Vietnam—30,000 to 40,000 men—use high-grade heroin.

The Senate subcommittee staff said there is a "paucity of hard data" on drug abuse in the armed forces but concluded that in the Army, the largest of the services and the one with the most draftees, the problem has been increasing in recent years and "a growing proportion of servicemen are entering the service with a history of drug use."

Hughes said the military has not come to grips with the problem of effective treatment for users of hard drugs like heroin, whether they acquired the habit before or after entering the service.

Cast Back

As a result, he said, "thousands of unrehabilitated addicts and abusers are being cast back onto civilian society to be cared for, usually with the added burden of less-than-honorable discharge."

"The military services constitute a system within which young people with drug problems at least can be identified," Hughes said. "Now we must find ways to get these people the help they need, whether that help is provided in the military or in civilian society."

"We also must discover realistic ways to deter new generations of military personnel from using drugs," he said, adding that punitive laws and threat of punishment alone do not.

Hughes said he had directed the subcommittee staff to consult with the Pentagon about the problem. He said he also was asking the comptroller general to study particular problem areas such as pre-induction screening of drug users and the adequacy of treatment facilities.

citizens, as a means of relieving what the governor called the high costs of citizen actions against pollution. The same legislation would put the burden of proof on the defendant in such cases.

Creation of a Wisconsin Environmental Policy Act that would require all governmental units to consider environmental impact of all public works, including buildings, highways, dams, and other facilities.

Lucey also announced the creation by executive order of a new Environmental Education Council to accelerate public understanding of resource issues, and asked the legislature to put up $90,000 for a starting appropriation.

DNR would be empowered to act immediately to remedy environmental damage, as by oil spills, and to assess the costs upon the violator responsible for the incident.

The governor said environmental problem awareness and compliance with law will be enhanced by more detailed public knowledge about offenders. He asked for authority to publish lists of the major air and water despoilers within the state.

Abatement Efforts

"In this way, the public can easily determine the success of the pollution abatement efforts of municipalities and industries by their presence on the list," he explained.

He announced the creation of a state land resources commission that will study means to improve the state's land protection policy by spearheading a broader policy than that embodied in the ORAP act adopted during the regime of predecessor Gov. Gaylord Nelson a decade ago. He asked also for a special appropriation to accelerate statewide land-using planning, a part of which would go to aid regional planning commissions now functioning or likely to be established.

He urged also that the DNR recreational land buying program give more emphasis to acquisitions in urban areas.

Newsmen Rested Little on China Visit

By JOHN RODERICK
Associated Press Writer

HONG KONG (AP) — I crossed into Hong Kong today with a wave, a handshake and a "tsai chien"—good by—for Mr. Wu, the worried, bespectacled man who had been my guide during a somewhat frantic 10-day visit to China.

I thought Mr. Wu and his young associate, Mr. Kuo, looked relieved when I walked across the covered bridge with John Rich and Jack Reynolds of NBC and their two Japanese assistants.

We had gone to China to cover the U.S. table tennis team's historic trip to the People's Republic. Averaging two hours of sleep a night, we looked, we took notes and we photographed.

My performance in the latter department left something to be desired. Mr. Wu, who is an amateur photographer, spent much of his time clucking at my ineptness: the first three rolls of film I snapped were blank.

In a Hurry

"Come along, come along, Mr. Roderick," said Mr. Wu—a blue uniformed guide-interpreter for the China travel people. That was his most popular refrain. Did I want to stop to chat with this old man at the Summer Palace? "Oh, Mr. Roderick, we must catch up with the rest of the party," he would say with obvious disapproval. Mr. Wu was in a hurry. He didn't have to wrestle with a complex Japanese camera, scribble notes in a bouncing bus or file a story over often fuzzy lines to Tokyo or Hong Kong.

Mr. Wu, who speaks fluent English, was helpful and informative. But when it came to getting film developed, he didn't have a clue. He vaguely knew that there was a China Commercial Photo studio in Peking, but he didn't think it would be worth approaching them. "They're very busy, you see," he said.

I implored, I beseeched. He thought we could do it later.

"This is a contradiction, Mr. Wu," I said, resurrecting my dialectics. "Can't you study the works of Chairman Mao and come up with a solution?"

No Prints

He promised to try. But in the entire trip, I didn't get a single roll developed. It probably was just as well, considering my photographic ability.

I discovered that China is divided into compartments, very water tight. Mr. Wu's job is to guide and interpret. The photo shop's job is something else. And the Waichaopu—foreign ministry—completely separate. Orders go up and down vertically but not across. That's why my film had to wait for Hong Kong.

Mr. Wu got us up bright and early at 6:30 Tuesday for the departure from Canton. Weary from a full day touring the Canton fair Monday—we were given three extra days to do this and visit a commune—we perhaps were a bit laggard.

"Come along, Mr. Roderick," said Mr. Wu. "You're never on time." I gulped down a breakfast of yogurt, pineapple, toast and coffee, paid my hotel bill—I was 17 yuan short—and said good by to the foreign businessmen who inhabit the massive, Soviet-style Tung Fang Hotel during fair time.

"Good luck, and be careful what you say," said one Swede who spoke with a Scot's brogue and ordered porridge. "Tell them the truth."

Nursing the Ching dynasty picnic basket I had picked up in Shanghai, I climbed into a small bus for the ride to the station, through the clean streets, past youths hiking into the countryside behind red flags. The weather was warm and sultry without a sun.

Two minutes after our train began rolling, a girl in blue overalls and pigtails was busy mopping up the aisle and tracking down flies. Cups of steaming tea appeared on the table beside us and the strident tones of a Chinese opera heroine poured with awful persistence through the ever-present loudspeakers.

In the dining car Chinese and foreigners lunched on what surely must be the most exotic menu ever served on any railroad: a selection of 10 chicken dishes, including golden minced croquette; eight pork and beef dishes; nine fish and shrimp dishes including a whole squirrel fish, whatever that was; seven pork liver and pork kidney dishes; five soups; six vermicelli and rice, of course.

The Western menu of beef steak, curry and other favorites seemed positively vulgar by comparison.

In one of the cars the Colombian table tennis team sang "Besame Mucho" and in another Chinese returning from visits to relatives intoned an ode to Mao, clutching their little red books.

VIP Treatment

At the customs and immigration area, we got VIP treatment, sailing past the other passengers. There was no opening of bags, no confiscation of undeveloped film. Ordinary travelers have to have their film printed in China. I marvel at how they do it.

Pausing at the Lowu bridge, we made our little speeches of thanks to Mr. Wu and Mr. Kuo. They smiled. Mr. Kuo said warmly, "Come back again." Mr. Wu, still faintly disapproving, did not join in. I think he had enough of American newsmen.

Enemy Shuns A Shau Valley Troop Contact

U.S., Vietnamese Units Engaged in Search for Targets

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. and South Vietnamese infantry battalions have finally moved into the A Shau valley but no significant contact with the enemy was reported today.

Associated Press Correspondent J. T. Wolkerstorfer reported from Lavang, the forward command post for the operation, that at least one battalion of about 400 troops from the U.S. 101st Airborne Division and sizable South Vietnamese units had been committed to the A Shau operation.

For the past week, U.S. and South Vietnamese reconnaissance teams have been operating in the 30-mile-long valley trying to find enemy targets to attack. Allied firebases have been set up all around the jungled valley to support the operation, which is named Lam Son 720, the successor to the South Vietnamese invasion of Laos, which was Lam Son 719.

The 101st Airborne is providing both helicopter and ground support for the operation.

One American field officer said the operation "will last as long as we have targets. You can expect us to operate all the way west to the Laotian border until the monsoons start."

Rains Due

The monsoon rains are expected to begin in about three weeks.

The valley 375 miles north of Saigon is just east of Base Area 611, a major North Vietnamese supply depot on the Ho Chi Minh trail network in southern Laos. The valley is an enemy infiltration corridor and supply transshipment point into the northern quarter of South Vietnam.

Although no action was reported in the valley, the U.S. Command said American fighter-bombers and helicopter gunships attacked a North Vietnamese column nine miles east of the A Shau on Monday and killed 30 of the enemy.

U.S. B52 bombers ranged over wide areas to attack North Vietnamese supply depots in South Vietnam Cambodia and Laos. The eight-jet Stratofortresses flew more than 50 strikes Monday and today, dropping 1,500 tons of bombs along the demilitarized zone in the northwestern corner of South Vietnam, north of Highway 9 in the Laotian panhandle and north of Highway 7 in eastern Cambodia. The two highways are key infiltration corridors and supply routes into South Vietnam.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported two clashes in the Mekondelta, one of them in the U Minh forest 145 miles southwest of Saigon. A communique said 39 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong were killed in the two clashes, while Saigon losses were one killed and six wounded.

The U.S. Navy announced the impending withdrawal of three Seabee units with a total of 1,700 men, reducing the number of Seabees in South Vietnam to 900.

Closing of Clinic To be Protested

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Birth control advocates scheduled a protest demonstration today in support of a clinic which, having become a focal point of the state's abortion controversy, was closed down by Dane County authorities Monday.

Alfred Kennan, director of the Midwest Medical Center, was taken into custody after officials said they received a complaint from the parents of a 17-year-old Minnesota girl.

The clinic had operated openly in the wake of a U.S. District Court ruling that Wisconsin could not prevent a woman from having an abortion in early months of pregnancy. The U.S. Supreme Court directed the District Court Monday to reconsider its ruling.

County officials declined to comment whether the Supreme Court's announcement had any bearing on Monday's decision to close the clinic, where about 10 law enforcement officers arrived to question Kennan.

A protest group, Concerned Madison Citizens, called for a demonstration in a corridor outside the office of the county's district attorney in support of the clinic.

A Coalition

"The state does not have the right to legislate on women's bodies," said Deborah Clark, a spokesman for the group.

The group is a coalition of organizations whose members represent the clergy, welfare groups, University of Wisconsin faculty wives and the women's liberation movement.

The clinic, because of its location in the state capital city, has drawn considerable attention from state legislators as Wisconsin reviews its statues which prohbit abortion unless the patient's life is in danger.

In Milwaukee, a District Court panel had ruled in March 1970 that the statute violates a woman's privacy.

The ruling appealed by the state, had been requested by Dr. Sidney G. Babbitz, who had been charged in Milwaukee County with breaking the state law by operating on a 23-year-old woman.

The Supreme Court opinion didn't necessarily declare the statute to be constitutional, but suggested the District Court set aside its ruling.

Milwaukee County's district attorney said he will now ask for dismissal of the complaint filed against him by Babbitz, whose own trial had been postponed pending the appeal.

Trial Planned

The county said that if the complaint is dismissed, trial will proceed in Circuit Court. The next hearing in the case is scheduled Oct. 19.

Dane County officials said Monday's raid at the controversial clinic included confiscation of medical equipment, forcing the facility to halt operations.

The district attorney's office said the clinic's records indicated 900 operations had been performed since Jan. 15, 1971, averaging $200 a patient.

Officials said the records had no indication that any death or illness had resulted from an operation. Patients ages ranged from 15 to 41, they said.

Taken into custody with Kennan were seven nursing assistants; and the Minnesota girl who authorities said was checked at a hospital and was reported in satisfactory condition. She was to return to her Minnesota home today.

Hotel Fire Kills 25

BANGKOK (AP) — A fire raged through the north wing of the Imperial hotel early today, killing 25 foreigners, police reported. They said 23 of the bodies had been recovered, but identification was a difficult task because the register was destroyed.

The police said it was believed the victims were Americans, Japanese, German, Chinese and Egyptian. The hotel near the American Embassy was popular with foreign tour groups, American service families and crews of some airlines.

Some of the bodies were found in corridors, others in the elevator. Most of the deaths were caused by asphyxiation.

Witnesses said the fire started about 4 a.m. after an explosion in the ground floor coffee shop, a popular after hours meeting place.

Police arrested the cook from the coffee shop.

Town Board Quits In a Big Huff

PITTSBURGH, Okla. (AP) — This southeastern Oklahoma town of 99 persons was left without a municipal government Monday.

The town's board of trustees resigned in the wake of a dispute over a water rate increase.

The trustees, Dee Foster, Ray Frosco and George Mitchell, recently raised the water rates from $2 to $4.

Foster said the resignations stemmed from the "girping of residents." Some had apparently been circulating a petition in opposition to the increase.

Until a special election can be called the town is without a government.

Ambulance Service...

Seidl and Welch serve a big portion of the Fox Cities area with their ambulances, while the rescue squad is limited to in-city runs.

Under an arrangement in effect for many years, the Appleton Police Department and the Outagamie County Sheriff's Department call Gold Cross and Larry's on a monthly rotation basis for accidents and other emergencies that necessitate patient conveyance. The ambulance bills are sent to the persons transported.

More lucrative than the short emergency runs for the ambulance operators are the trips with patients to distant medical facilities, such as Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., and to patients' homes or other destinations outside Appleton.

But Welch said it would not pay a private operator to maintain an ambulance service just for out-of-city runs.

Welch has two ambulances, a 1968 Chevrolet van capable of carrying four patients (the vehicle is similar to the one the fire department wants to buy) and a 1970 Cadillac. Both Gold Cross ambulances are kept in a garage-office at 1335 S. Oneida St.

Seidl has five ambulances, four of them kept at his home at 116 S. Weimer St., and one in Kimberly. Two of his ambulances are 1963 Cadillacs, two are 1966 Cadillacs and one is a 1960 Pontiac.

Seidl said he is holding off buying new equipment until the rescue squad vehicle issue is resolved.

Gold Cross is the only one of the three emergency services having direct, two-way radio contact with the police and sheriff's departments. Seidl has citizen band radios in his ambulances and the rescue squad had direct radio contact only with the fire department.

A dozen men work as attendants and drivers for God Cross. Eleven of them are part-time employes, paid on a per-call basis. Seidl said he has 20 employes, two of them working full time. Several attendants have been with the firms since they were started.

The ambulance garages are not manned around the clock, although Seidl and Welch said they usually have personnel near the ambulances during the day. Key ambulance attendants live within a few blocks of both garages and they receive incoming ambulance calls at their homes. A driver and an attendant are in the ambulance on emergency calls.

Seidl and Welch said they could not afford to staff their ambulances 24 hours a day. Welch said it would cost him at least $100,000 a year, for equipment and personnel, and he added, "this city won't generate $100,000 worth of ambulance business a year."

Fire department officials maintain that because firemen are on duty all the time, they can have the rescue squad on the road 30 seconds to a minute after a call is received.

They maintain that promptness of response could be critical in some emergency situations, particularly those involving heart attacks, poison, severe bleeding and breath stoppage.

Seidl and Welch said their response time is only a minute or two more than the rescue squad's. Welch said his ambulances could get to a south side destination before the rescue squad, which is housed at No. 1 fire station at 700 N. Drew St.

But Seidl and Welch said fire department officials over-emphasize the importance of response time. The first three minutes after the person stops breathing is the critical time, and it's virtually impossible for even the rescue squad to be there that quick, Welch said, because calls for assistance seldom are made immediately after a victim collapses.

"When you're talking about response time, you can't say it isn't important," he explained. "It is. But this talk about seconds making the difference is not true."

Both ambulance operators said that although it might be difficult for the patient or someone with him to understand, there actually are very few true emergency cases where response time is critical.

Seidl and Welch insist their attendants receive more and better training than firemen, although it is nearly impossible to evaluate and compare the thoroughness and quality of training received by each. In many instances, rescue squad and ambulance attendants receive their training from the same sources.

Welch sees some of the best training his men receive as that gained by assisting hospital personnel, on request, in emergency rooms after patients are brought in by ambulance.

Ambulance operators contend that their vehicles are better designed and equipped for proper patient treatment and conveyance work.

Seidl said that since rescue squad business has picked up, he has found in increasingly difficult to keep qualified men on a standby basis, especially on weekends. The men know the rescue squad is going on runs that his firm should be getting, Seidl said.

Seidl believes many people call the rescue squad because they feel they will not have to pay the $25 transportation fee.

The city finance director's office does the billing for rescue squad runs. Although Finance Director David Champion refused to release the collection figures for 1970, it was learned that the city sent 238 bills, totaling $5,950 for rescue squad services, of which only 135 were paid, with collections totaling $3,390.

One source said that little attempt is made to collect from persons who do not pay for rescue squad service.

Welch feels the fire department probably will get its new emergency vehicle.

Seidl says he doesn't think the measure will pass the City Council. "The people of Appleton are getting sick and tired of the city being in the ambulance business," he said.

"The next thing you know, the city will be opening a supermarket, gas station or department store," he remarked.

Democrats to Pay Dues to State Party

had been concerned that the Milwaukee County party organization, unlike other county units in the state, was paying no dues to support the state headquarters in Madison. This was mentioned in the December resolution. She said the Milwaukee organization now sends its dues into the state and receives back a share to cover operations. A greater share of its rightful workload has been assumed by the Milwaukee office, too, she added.

Mrs. Patterson stressed that "two-way participation is needed to carry out a proper procedure for running party affairs."

Too often, she said, both county units and the state administrative agency had remained a part. "We need concrete suggestions to improve our party," she said. This works up from the county level to the district to county. She urged the group to make known its complaints and suggestions at the administrative level.

In other business, the county unit passed a resolution inviting the Republican party of Outagamie County to "join with us in forming a joint committee to coordinate and assist local efforts to ensure success" in gaining Environmental Protection Agency funding for a cleanup program of the Fox River.

The resolution was in response to an article in Tuesday's The Post-Crescent that said the executive committee of the Outagamie County Republican party had agreed to look for ways to encourage local cooperation in attempting to have federal officials choose the Fox for a river cleanup demonstration project.

Thomas Patterson, Oshkosh, author of the resolution, said, in presenting it, "Water quality of the Fox is of concern to all citizens, regardless of party. The cleanup plan is a most worthy, bipartisan, environmental project."

The Rev. Robert Cornell, unsuccessful Democratic candidate for the 8th District Congressional seat, told the group that the district's loss of Manitowoc County, according to proposed reapportionment plans, would be "a catastrophe."

He said, "We may as well write off the 8th District for Democratic victories for the next 10 years if we lose Manitowoc. We have to save it if there's ever a chance."

No plans were discussed to accomplish this, but alternate methods of reapportionment were mentioned.

Slates of delegates and alternates to the state party convention and the 8th District convention were accepted.

Larry Longley, Outagamie County Democratic party chairman and 8th District first vice chairman, announced his candidacy for an at-large position on the state administrative committee at the state convention in Madison in June.

Longley said he decided to run because of his concern for past financial and administrative difficulties in the state party.

Razor Blades Found in Pit For Track

NEW LONDON — School officials are investigating the discovery Thursday of razor blades in the long-jump pit at the senior high school.

According to school officials, the blades were found by some girls who were using the pit before regular track practice began.

Four of the double-edge blades were broken and a fifth one was found whole. The container for the blades also was found in the pit.

Although it is believed there were only five blades, the sand in the pit is being thoroughly sifted. The blades had to have been placed in the sand recently, since the pit was filled just the day before the incident, spokesmen said.

No injuries were reported.

New City Council Meets Tonight

CLINTONVILLE — The reorganizational meeting of the City Council will be at 7:30 p.m. today in the council room of city hall.

Two new aldermen will be taking office. They are Kenneth Suehring in the 4th Ward, who defeated incumbent James Born in the April 6 election, and Donald Krueger, 3rd Ward, who defeated incumbent Clarence Smith. Aldermen re-elected April 6 were Leon Steenbock (1st), Robert Kitzman (2nd) and Fred Hangartner (5th).

Suit for Communion

Dad's Reflection

STOCKBRIDGE — Edward M. Meyers received his first Holy Communion Sunday in the same suit his father wore on a similar occasion 28 years ago.

The second grader at St. Mary Catholic School walked toward the altar in the parish church wearing the same charcoal grey, wool plaid suit his father, Donald W. Meyers, wore in June, 1943, when he received his first communion at St. Joseph Church in Barron, Wis.

The coat and vest fit fine, but the trousers were a little large and had to be shortened. Meyers obviously was taller 28 years ago than his son is today. Unable to have them tailored in time for the occasion, Mrs. Meyers sought the assistance of a local seamstress, Mrs. Veronica Bushman, who took them in and shortened them.

Mrs. Edward Meyers, Barron, Edward's grandmother, recently produced the suit she had saved from her only son's memorable occasion. Meyers' first communion medals still were attached to the coat. "It makes me so proud to see him wear it," Grandma Meyers said, adding that all of her grandchildren had been baptized in her son's baptismal gown.

Though the Meyers have three children, two boys and a girl, Mrs. Meyers said she had forgotten about the suit when her grandson Mark received his first communion "and I almost didn't remember it now," she laughed.

Meyers said his mother "keeps all kinds of things," noting that she still had her wedding dress and a lock of hair from when she was 18 years old.

"But I couldn't find the black bow tie that went with the outfit," Grandma Meyers confessed. That was no problem though. Edward's mother borrowed one from a friend to complete her husband's reflection.

In spite of flares, and fads and 28 years, young Edward was dressed in the height of fashion, in his double breasted suit and vest.

Belated Easter Party

Young People Help Retarded Enjoy Day

STOCKBRIDGE — Togetherness, communication and a feeling of belonging were evident Sunday as the Stockbridge and Chilton chapter of the Calumet Young Asociation for Retarded Children (YARC) entertained a group of Calumet County retarded children at the high school here.

It was a belated Easter party with an egg hunt in the gymnasium, a sing-a-long and refreshments.

Opening with a non-denominational religious service conducted by Miss Bernice Gerinert, Greenville, with Mrs. Lawrence Filyes, Brillion, at the piano, the retarded youths recited the 23rd Psalm and sang several hymns. Miss Gerinert is in charge of religious instructions when the group meets twice a month at Grand Street Alliance Church in Chilton. Miss Gerinert is assisted by Mrs. Hazel Becker, Brillion, who is in charge of the craft work.

YARC members escorted their friends on the egg hunt, played bean bags and taught them a few fancy dance steps. Most of the boys enjoyed sailing the basketballs. Laughter, encouragement and the sounds of gleeful voices filled the gymnasium.

Hand clapping and foot stamping accompanied a sing-a-long led by Richard Weinberger, a member of the high school faculty.

Refreshments were served and a group of about 70 young people left for home with happy memories tucked beside treats in their Easter baskets.

Green Bay's Tom Miller Is Speaker

CHILTON — Tom Miller, assistant general manager of the Green Bay Packers, spoke Thursday night at a joint meeting of the Jaycees, Kiwanis, and Rotary Clubs.

He substituted for Packer President Dominic Olejniczak, who was unable to come as has been expected.

Miller gave a brief rundown on the possibilities of new players for the pack as well as looking forward to see Bart Starr, No. 1 quarterback in action again.

Miller said the most difficult task in regard to football is the scheduling of games, problems with weather at certain locations.

The Packers—or any football team he noted—could not survive on gate receipts alone. They depend on TV programs, films and other franchises to keep them solvent. He told one questioner, "Yearly income for the Packers is around $4 or $5 million and expenses around $4 or $5 million".

Asked why games are not televised when season tickets are sold out, Miller explained that "televising could hurt us," and said he felt it would not be fair to season ticket holders. If people could watch at home and we hit bad weather, this could ruin our sales. He noted it was tried in baseball and they got hurt.

Miller said that the waiting list for season tickets is about 8,000.

The invocation was presented by Rev. Alvin Auer, pastor of St. Augustines Catholic Church and benediction was given by the Rev. Quentin Moeschberger, past of Ebenezer United Church of Christ.

Dr. Clifford Kobriger, Rotarian was chairman for the dinner event.
